ZEP RACING INTO FOG PERIL

Today

News From the Air.
Britain Always Prepares.
Fifty Years of C. S.
Life in a Graveyard.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MUCH news in the air.

Dr. Eckener is flying across the Pacific, going, at this writing, 100 miles an hour on his 5,470-mile hop.

He hopes to cover the distance in 80 hours, but storm warnings may cause a detour.

YOUNG ladies from the Pacific Coast, flying in the face of tragedy, reach Wichita, Kan. And it is hot.

MOST important to aviation and to real estate is the success of a Spanish flier and inventor landing his plane vertically, and "as lightly as a falling feather."

A MACHINE that can go straight up and come straight down softly, instead of hitting the earth at 50 miles an hour, will change flying conditions. Also real estate conditions.

WHEN business men fly from their office or factory roof to residences on hill or mountain tops, hundreds of miles away, there will be drastic revaluations in real estate.

Don't be in a hurry to sell.

WHILE the French and British tell how much they love each other, with an occasional discordant note from Mr. Snowden, the two friends across the Channel are actively building up fighting air fleets that each intends for the other.

THREE engine passenger planes, subsidized heavily by Britain, flying between Paris and London, are simply great bombing planes, kept ready in case of trouble.

FRANCE has established the world's most powerful air base near Mont Saint Michel, across the Channel from Britain.

The British say it can be meant only for them and they don't like it. Well-informed Britishers tell you, "We must be polite to France in everything now, he. superior air fleets could wipe out our big cities in a forenoon."

But we shall gradually change that situation.

In America, we rely on brotherly love and platitudinous peace pacts.

FIFTY years ago yesterday Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy and six students organized the first Christian Science church, known now as the Mother Church.

This writer talked with Mrs. Eddy, at her request, when she was long past 80. Her energy and clearness of mind were remarkable, although she weighed less than 90 pounds.

Her work has given comfort to millions, which is the most important thing that religion can do, on earth. If it can save you, later, that is more important.

MRS. AUGUSTA STETSON, one of Mrs. Eddy's best known students, established the first Christian Science church in New York City, in a large room, above a drug store.

"Science above drugs" was her motto. She and Mrs. Eddy are both gone. Old death justifies his motto, "I come last and win."

ALMOST 90 years ago, on the land now part of Arlington Cemetery, Jim Parks was born, a slave of George Washington's adopted son, G. W. Parks Custis.

Jim Parks worked on "Arlington Estate" as a slave, when "freedom" came. Played there as a child, worked there long years as guide. He saw coffins stacked in big piles, after the Civil War, saw other wars increase the number of white headstones.

NOW his death adds one to those headstones. He was buried yesterday where he had worked by special permission of the War Department, which usually bars civilians.

HAD anybody asked Jim Parks to define a free man, he might have said, "Look at me, I am free." And he spent his whole life in Arlington, fed by his master-owner, on a slavery basis, fed by Uncle Sam later, on a wage basis.

We are confined to this little round graveyard, the earth, doomed in time to add one to its graves.

And we also call ourselves free.

PATE HUDDLESTON, Georgia farmer, 53 years old, had a daughter. He is dead now.

Marcus Brown, farmer, 42 and married, paid attention to the daughter. Her father told him to stop.

"MEET me on Main street with a shotgun," was Brown's reply.

BROWN came with his shotgun, emptied its charge into Huddleston's stomach. Huddleston, dying, fired from the chair, killing Brown instantly. Then he died.

Hate is a powerful emotion. Each man knew that he would

ORPHAN GIRL'S CHARGE HOLDS POLICEMAN

Victim, Seeking Directions, Taken to Guffey Mansion Ruins; 3 Rescuers Face Gun

Attacked by a uniformed policeman, to whom she had appealed for directions when lost, a 15-year-old girl today in Morals Court identified Patrolman James V. McDermott, 32, of 354 Thirty-ninth street, as her assailant.

He also was identified as the officer who flourished a revolver and threatened three men who had gone to the girl's rescue. McDermott was held for court on two serious charges.

RETURNING FROM MOVIE

Employed for a week in a Clyde street home, after having lived in an orphanage, the girl, whose name the Sun-Telegraph will not publish because of her age, told Magistrate A. D. Brandon that she had become lost last night while returning from an Oakland movie theater. She appealed to a policeman for directions. He said he would take her home. The girl testified he used a police call box and reported "$27" and then started with her.

She says he took her to the shadow of a building, where he

RUTH ELDER TO WED CAMP, JR.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 24.—Ruth Elder, near trans-Atlantic flier and late of the Hollywood movie colony, confirmed a report today that she was engaged to marry Walter Camp, son of the former Yale football mentor and sports writer.

As the planes were taking off from Clover Field, Santa Monica, Camp rushed up to Miss Elder's plane.

"Will you marry me?" he shouted above the roar of the motors.

Ruth smiled as the starter's gun cut the conversation.

Her first stop was San Bernardino. From there she long-distanced her "yes."

WOMAN CASHIER HELD UP, LONE BANDIT FLEES

Robber Escapes While Town Watches for Mail Train; State Police on 'Hot' Clue

By GEORGE SHRADLE.
Staff Correspondent.

ADDISON, Pa., Aug. 24.—State police were following a clue today expected to bring the arrest of the lone robber who shut Maude L. Dean, assistant cashier, in the vault and escaped with between $500 and $1,500 from the First National Bank of Addison.

Declaring he was "desperate for money," the robber carried Miss Dean from the front door of the bank to the vault. Miss Dean's screams failed to attract attention, although the bank door was open. After gathering the loot the robber leaped into an automobile he had left standing in front of the building. The car was facing east. The robber turned it around and sped west in the direction of Uniontown.

WOMAN TELLS STORY

Miss Dean, sister of M. H. Dean, cashier, was alone in the bank at the time. Relating details of the holdup, she said:

"The man entered the bank about an hour before the robbery and asked for my brother. I informed him that Mr. Dean was out of town and he said he only wanted to tell him he found the little book he had thought was lost. I don't know what he could have been referring to. It

Spokane Fire Loss Close to $500,000

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—A mass of glowing embers covering damages estimated variously from $350,000 to $500,000 was all that remained here today of a dozen dwelling houses, an apartment building, a sanitarium and the storage and fuel yard of the McGoldrick Lumber Company. They were destroyed when a blaze started early last night in a lumber pile and soon was whiped into a conflagration by a gale-like wind.

Every piece of fire fighting equipment in the city but five, together with a pumper from Couer D'Alene, Ida., fought the blaze for six hours before it was brought under control.

Body of Hanged Woman Unclaimed

HULL, Quebec, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Unclaimed by any of her eight children, the body of Marie Viau lay in Hull jail today, awaiting burial in a nearby potter's field.

The 43-year-old woman, hanged with Philbert Lefebvre, 32, for the poisoning of her husband, Zephyr Viau, spent the hours before she mounted the gallows writing last messages to each of her children, to her mother and other relatives. All went unanswered. Lefebvre's body was claimed by his father.

3 WILMERDING HOMES AFIRE

Three families were driven from their apartments and an auto tire and service station was damaged in a midnight fire, all because an automobile skidded on a wet rail in Airbrake avenue, Wilmerding.

The auto, after a couple turns, knocked over a gasoline pump and the gasoline ignited.

Flames spread to the two-story frame building used by the Hurbro Tire Service Company, 323-25 Airbrake avenue, and forced out three families in apartments on the second floor. The driver of the car escaped before the flames reached him.

Louis Carlson, his wife and three children had returned a few minutes before the accident, and made a hurried exit from their apartment, which was badly damaged. The families of Robert McKenna and Arthur McCarron, other tenants, fled.

Wilmerding firemen, who fought the flames, estimated the damage at $8,000. The service station is operated by J. M. and Sam Hurwitz. The building is owned by John Burtt, of Swissvale.

The auto which caused the fire is said to have been owned by an East Pittsburgh politician, but not driven by him at the time.

Judd Gray 'Talks' To Daughter From Grave

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—A voice from the unknown spoke today to the one that its mortal master loved most.

Judd Gray, dead these 19 months since he and Ruth Snyder went to Sing Sing's electric chair for their murder of Albert Snyder, was speaking to the daughter he cherished above all—his little Jane, 12 years old today.

He was speaking not as a man who had loved unwisely and who had slain. He was speaking just as "daddy."

The letter than Jane will receive today, although from a father long dead, is written in the tenor of a living parent advising a beloved child. There will be 10 more of them, one each birthday anniversary until Jane is 22. Jane is living with relatives at Norwalk, Conn.

GRIMES BACK IN TWIN BILL

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Pirates and Giants today were all set for a dual bill at the Polo Grounds, the bargain attraction growing out of yesterday's postponement.

Burleigh Grimes, who was injured on the Polo Grounds just five weeks ago today, will return to the mound in one of the games. It is likely that Grimes will be on the slab in the last encounter, as Remy Kremer, who also will pitch, was scheduled to perform yesterday.

KLINE'S 'SLATE' ANNOUNCED

The Kline slate of candidates seeking city and county offices at the Republican primaries was announced today. At a meeting in the William Penn Hotel, this slate was decided upon:

Council—Clifford B. Connelley, W. Y. English, John S. Herron, M. J. Muldowney.

Sheriff—Robert S. Cain.
Coroner—William J. McGregor.
Judges—James B. Drew, John A. Evans, Edward G. Chalfant, H. W. Mitchell, Thomas C. Jones.

Malone and Kline slates are the same for judges and coroner.

At the meeting, Cain won out, 19 to 8, over former Captain of Detectives Clyde S. Edeburn for sheriff.

The slate of candidates was selected by the committee named at the mass meeting in North Side Carnegie Hall Tuesday. Dr. F. H. Frederick is temporary chairman of this body, which includes 22 Republican ward chairmen.

Late political developments follow:

1 Judge Richard W. Martin, speaking in Homewood, reiterated his demand that the police department be separated from politics and declared that Mayor Charles H. Kline and Councilman James F. Malone, his opponents, "were hand in glove until both wanted to be mayor."

2. Attorney B. Robert Averbach, speaking for Kline over Station KDKA, discounted Martin's attacks on the police de-

(Copyright, 1929, International News Service.)

ON BOARD GRAF ZEPPELIN (Via Radio to I. N. S.)—Aug. 24.—Favored by a following wind of 20 miles per hour velocity, the Graf Zeppelin at 11:50 o'clock tonight (7:50 a. m., Saturday, Pittsburgh time) was bowling over the Pacific Ocean at a speed of 70 miles per hour.

The Zeppelin's position was 44.10 degrees north latitude, 175.30 degrees east longitude, approximately 2,100 miles east by northeast of Tokio.

The Zeppelin was cruising with but four of her five mtors in operation.

All on board were well and happy. At the time of filing this dispatch the airship was only about 300 miles from the 180th meridian, at which point the Graf will sail from tomorrow into today. On passing the 180th meridian the Graf loses 10 hours in clock time, her position changing from 17 hours ahead of Eastern daylight time to seven hours behind that time.

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service.

TOKIO, Aug. 24.—Plunging over the broad Pacific toward the fearsome fog belt south of the Aleutian Islands, the giant dirigible Graf Zeppelin, en route from Tokio to Los Angeles on the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight, today was nearing the 2,000-mile mark of the longest sustained transoceanic flight ever attempted by aircraft.

On the basis of fairly frequent reports from the dirigible telling of speedy progress across the Pacific, it was computed that a 5 p. m. today (4 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight saving time), the Graf was fast approaching the unmarked spot in the ocean which would mean she had left 2,000 miles of storm-tossed waves behind her in the trail-blazing flight over the Pacific expanses.

Flies Far South of Steamer Lane to Miss Storms

Striking a northeast course slightly north of the thirty-fifth parallel, Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Graf's commander, is piloting the huge ship along a route some 500 miles south of the great circle steamer lanes, thus cutting himself off from visual contact with the passenger liners which ply between America and Asia.

This route was decided upon because of reports of adverse weather conditions along the steamer course. Sharp headwinds, rainstorms and electrical disturbances such as that which tossed the dirigible like a loosened kite yesterday were reported over the steamer lane, and Dr. Eckener immediately resolved to cancel his first intention of flying over the steamer track and take the safer, if longer, course.

The route the Graf Zeppelin is now flying is some 500 miles longer than the course originally decided upon, but in the opinion of Commander Eckener it cuts down to a large extent the hazards to be encountered on this pioneering commercial flight across the Pacific, heretofore unconquered by aircraft of any kind without intermediate stops.

Heading Toward Treacherous Fog Area

But even this conservative choice of route is far from removing all the hazards to be met in trans-Pacific flight. The ocean area south of the Aleutian Islands, that desolate, sprawling, broken chain of land extending far westward into the Pacific from the Alaskan Peninsula, is one of the worst patches in the Pacific.

Forty per cent of the time it is completely enveloped in densest fog, cloaking the entire area in a gray, murky shroud, Several hundred miles square, the area is avoided whenever possible by mariners, for, unlike the fogs over some areas of the Atlantic, the Aleutian shroud can never be counted upon to lift after a brief period of blotting out the sun.

In addition, the area for several hundred miles south of the islands is subject to severe and sudden storms, and latest weather reports indicate that conditions far from favorable are to be encountered in that vicinity at present.

At times reaching 100 miles hourly, the Zeppelin thus far

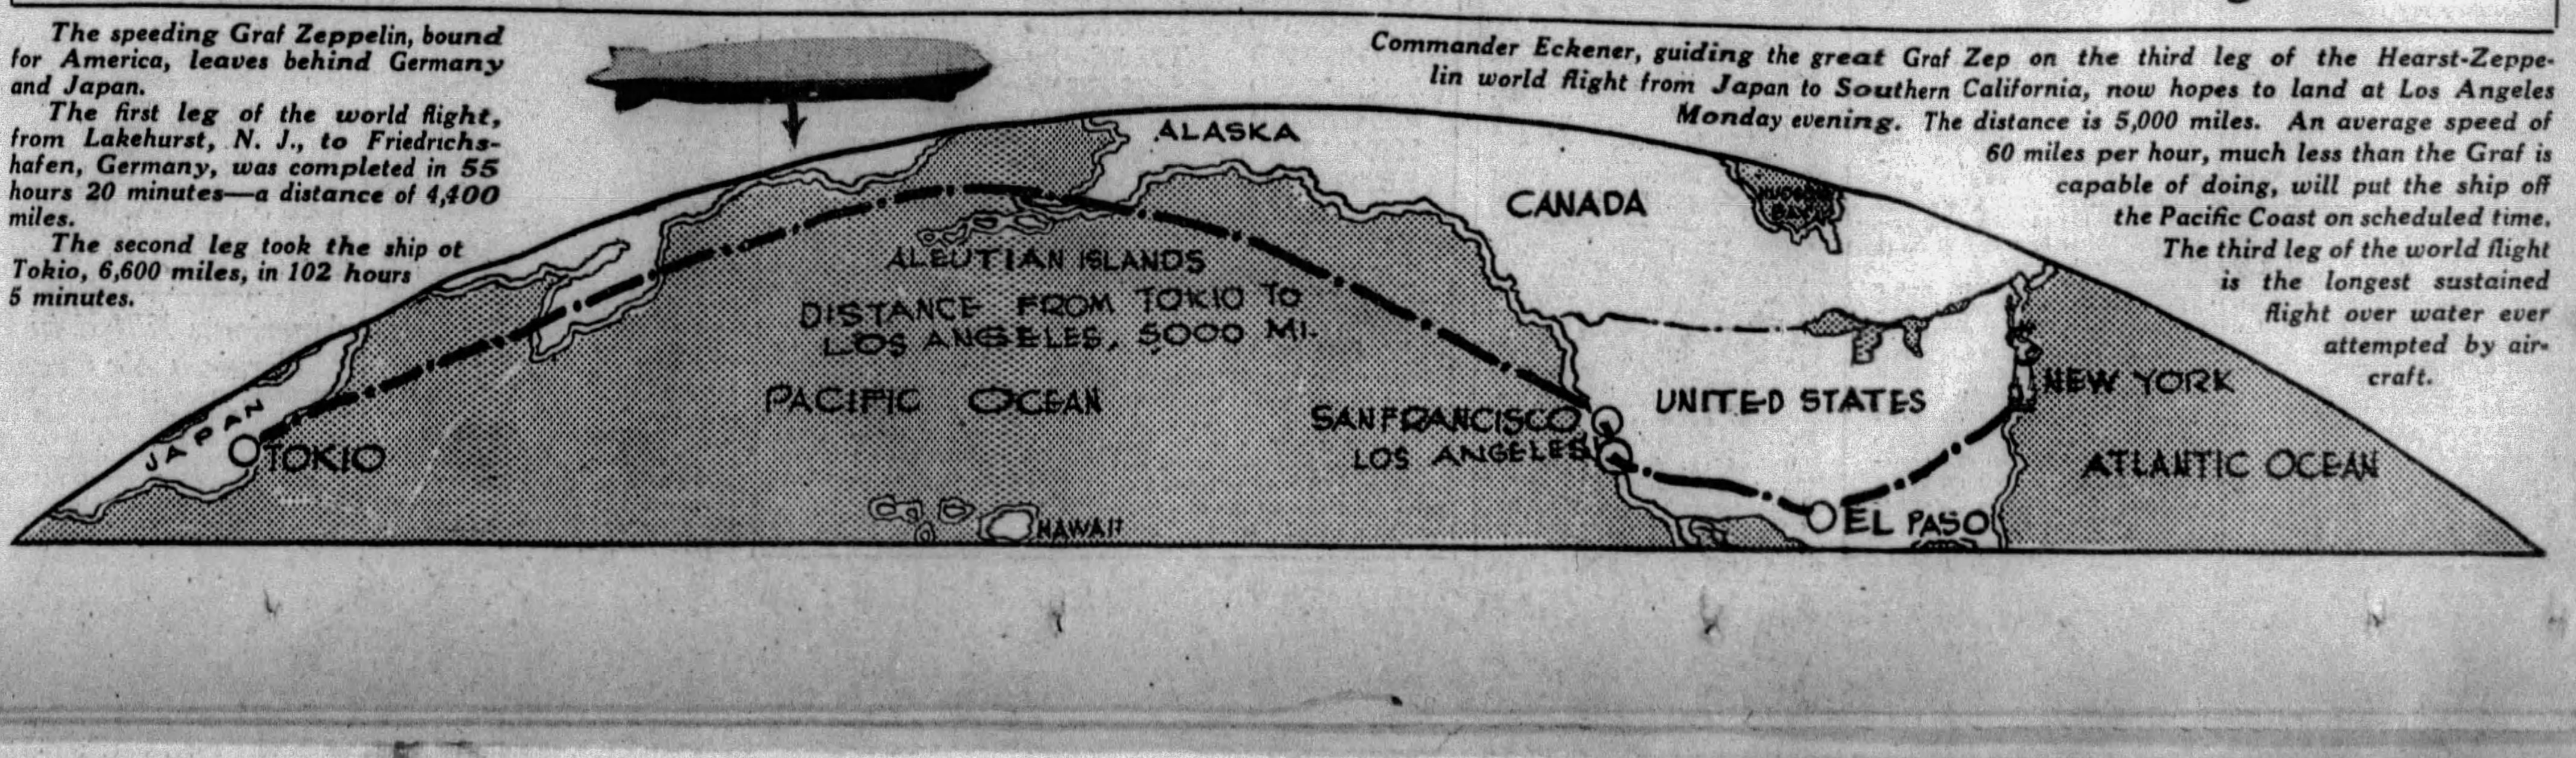
Following Graf Zep As Big Ship Speeds Over Pacific Towards Los Angeles



The speeding Graf Zeppelin, bound for America, leaves behind Germany and Japan.

The first leg of the world flight, from Lakehurst, N. J., to Friedrichshafen, Germany, was completed in 55 hours 20 minutes—a distance of 4,400 miles.

The second leg took the ship ot Tokio, 6,600 miles, in 102 hours 5 minutes.

Commander Eckener, guiding the great Graf Zep on the third leg of the Hearst-Zeppelin world flight from Japan to Southern California, now hopes to land at Los Angeles Monday evening. The distance is 5,000 miles. An average speed of 60 miles per hour, much less than the Graf is capable of doing, will put the ship off the Pacific Coast on scheduled time. The third leg of the world flight is the longest sustained flight over water ever attempted by aircraft.

PILOT HOPES TO ARRIVE MONDAY

has averaged a spanking pace of almost 70 miles an hour, and, if no unforeseen complication develops to hamper progress, Dr. Eckener should easily realize his desire to be in Los Angeles by Tuesday.

An indication of the Graf's remarkable speed was seen in the position broadcast at 10 a. m. today (9 p. m. Pittsburgh daylight saving time Friday), and picked up by the Japanese government wireless station at Ochiishi, on the Island of Hokkaido.

At this time, the Graf gave her position as 161.25 East longitude, 39.20 North latitude, which is approximately 1,190 miles east of the Kasumiguari airport, where the Graf took off at 3:12 p. m. yesterday (2:12 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight saving time).

She had accomplished almost 1,200 miles in less than 19 hours of flying, in spite of crashing into a violent electrical storm of such proportions that for a while the huge ship was tossed as helplessly as a leaf in an October wind.

Aeronautical experts here, who are watching the progress of the dirigible with an "air-minded" interest unprecedented in Japanese history, feel that the Graf's conquest of that storm proves beyond the shadow of a doubt the practicability of airships of this type to withstand successfully the worst that elemental disturbances have to offer.

fire," for it was the first time the dirigible had experienced lightning, but messages sent out from aboard the airship told how she had come through the ordeal unscathed, never once faltering although the violence of the storm descended upon the dirigible in all its tempestual fury.

Ship Tossed by Wind

The storm was undoubtedly the worst in the long flying career of the dirigble. Although only half an hour in duration, it was violent in the extreme. Tossing the Zeppelin as fitful gusts of wind toss a kite on a string, the gale threw the ship up and down through inky black clouds and hurtled it through the air at breath-taking speed.

Sinister flashes of lightning split the heavens, illuminating for seconds at a time the swirling masses of black clouds that raced by the airship's windows, while rushing wind currents swept the ship from side to side.

Dr. Eckener, calm and serene in the face of the tempest, told the passengers to prepare for a shaking up as he saw the ominous black clouds piling ahead while the barometer in the ship's control cabin dropped warningly. Assured by their commander that the storm, no matter how violent its proportions, held no danger for the rigidly-constructed dirigible, the passengers clustered close to the windows to lose no portion of the thrills involved in racing through the air, high above an invisible sea, in the grip of an incipient typhoon.

Wires Hauled In

The storm far exceeded in intensity the disturbance met by the Graf off the Bermudas on its first trans-Atlantic flight from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst. But it was over in a much shorter space of time. While yesterday's tempest was at its height, the Graf was completely out of touch with the world, for Dr. Eckener ordered the ship's trailing wireless antennae hauled in, fearful lest the copper wires attract one of the lightning bolts that were hurled through fissures in the sky.

It was during dinner that the storm broke. Messages from the Graf said that as usual Lady Grace Drummond Hay, the only woman aboard the ship, was the calmest of any of the passengers.

Almost two-fifths of the 5,000-mile distance separating Tokio from Los Angeles have now rolled away beneath the Graf, and before the night has passed on this side of the world and day in the Western Hemisphere, reports are expected from the Graf to tell of her successful passing of the half-way mark between the Flowery Kingdom and the sun-kissed California coast.

Arrival Monday Goal

Wind and weather conditions peculiar to the Pacific will in all probabilities influence Dr. Eckener to vary his course daily, even though this means lengthening of the time which will be required to link Asia and America in the first direct non-stop flight across the wide girth of the world's largest ocean. At present, the ship is in an area of "beam winds," cutting across the dirigible's path and neither aiding nor retarding progress.

Should Dr. Eckener receive word of a favorable following wind somewhere near his track, he undoubtedly will swerve from his course to take advantage of it, while, by the same token, he will not hesitate to lengthen the journey by 100 miles or more to avoid headwinds which would hamper progress and lay the dirigible and its complement of passengers and crew open to additional dangers.

In a message received here shortly before 2 p. m. this afternoon (1 a. m., Pittsburgh Daylight Saving Time), Dr. Eckener expressed the hope that favorable conditions might enable him to reach California by Monday evening.

Pigeons Carry Notes

The message stated that continuation of present conditions may enable the Graf to be over San Diego, Cal., by 11 p. m., G. M. T., Monday (7 p. m., Pittsburgh Daylight Saving Time).

In addition, the wireless confirmed that the Graf was proceeding along a course east by northeast toward the Aleutian Islands. The sea was calm but there was considerable fog.

"There is no pitch or roll," the message declared, indicating that the huge air monarch is speeding through the skies with a steadiness that even the ocean greyhounds whose domain is the five-mile deep sea beneath her barely achieve.

Two carrier pigeons, released by a Japanese newspaper correspondent aboard the Zeppelin, arrived here today carrying official messages from the dirigible. Three others found their way back to land without dispatches, while the remaining bird of the six taken aboard when the Zeppelin started out, has not yet returned.

San Francisco Plans Greeting for Zeppelin

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—Plans for a unique welcome for the Graf Zeppelin were to be perfected at a meeting of a citizens' reception committee today in the office of Mayor James Rolph, Jr. Supervisor Milo Kent suggested to the committee, headed by George Hearst, that the Hearst-Zeppelin round-the-world ship be greeted by a fireworks display atop Mt. Davidson and an aerial bombardment. Lieut. Col. Gerald C. Brant, commandant of Crissy Field, will report details of his arrangements for a fleet of airplanes to sail north to meet the dirigible and escort it into the city. Every factory and steamship whistle will sound a salute.

Faces Manslaughter Charge After Quarrel

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Aug. 24.—Charged with stabbing Edward Harris, of Pottsville, Pa., while in an altercation in a poolroom at Flushing, Jack Roice will face a charge of manslaughter. Harris died in the hospital at Martins Ferry.

Navy Planes Plan To Clear Air For Graf

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—When the dirigible Graf Zeppelin approaches Los Angeles early next week a path through Southern California's airplane-infested sky will be cleared for it by a special naval flight patrol.

The aerial squadron, under command of Lieut. Esten B. Koger, commandant of the naval reserve aviation base at Long Beach, will be comprised of 10 standard navy planes. It will assume a position about the Graf as soon as the big craft nears Los Angeles and will circle continuously about it until it is moored to its specially constructed stub mast at Mines Field.

GUNMAN LOOTS GARAGE

A lone robber, armed with a revolver, early today held up David Babcock, Jr., 22, of 55 Hawthorne avenue, Crafton, night manager of the Hertz Drive-It-Yourself Garage, 6208 Broad street, robbed the cash register of $301 and escaped after binding the manager.

Babcock was found 20 minutes later by John Hatcher, Negro janitor, of 766 Bryn Mawr road, who released him. Police of the Frankstown Avenue Station were notified and a description of the robber was furnished to them.

AMBRIDGE, Pa., Aug. 24.—After a plunge down a 75-foot embankment at a dump at French Point and Fourteenth street, William Seven, 56, dairyman, escaped uninjured. His horse was cut about the face. The horse soon resumed its job. Seven backed too close to the edge, when the earth gave away.

WOMAN DANCER SHOOTS SELF

Mrs. Esther Pascale, 33, of 228 Omega street, was to be arraigned in Morals Court today on a charge of disorderly conduct. Because of ill health, police said, she attempted to end her life by firing a bullet from a revolver into her body last night.

When police from the Frankstown Avenue Station responded to her telephone call asking for an emergency wagon she was removed to Pittsburgh Hospital, where she was treated for a slight wound.

Lucky Bucks—New Money for Old

By LUCKY BUCK.

Well, folks, every place I went today, the folks were sleepy and had their eyes closed to Lucky Bucks. What can you do in a case like that? If you ask me, just mosey on your way and laugh at them. And that's what I did.

BUYING A MAP

For instance. I went into the haberdashery at 432 Washington road and had a long discussion with the boss about collars. He wanted me to take a short collar, I wanted to take a long collar. So I, a man who am never balked in an argument, had the last word, as usual. I bought a short collar. That was with Lucky Buck No. Y87549193D.

And I wanted an aerial map of the United States, so I asked the lady what is in the map department at Weldin's, 413 Wood street, if she had one. She didn't, but another map soothed me sufficiently for her to get me out of her store and away. At the Mt. Oliver Hemstitching Shop, 317 Brownsville road, I secured for my big moment something like two very nice hand-hemstitched lady's handkerchiefs, while the gasoline from the station at Clairton and Brownsville roads made the boss' car a most rambunctious mount.

Pretty Miss Ann Atherton, a waitress at the National Restaurant, 224 Eighth avenue, Homestead, contributed much to my appreciation of my lunch. Sibilant Simoleon No. T88439739D went her way.

Alertness rewarded Mrs. Thomas J. Wallace, 3213 War street, South Side, with a double sawbuck yesterday. Since I started speeling my speel in the Sun-Telegraph, Mrs. Wallace has held all her singletons until she could check with a Sun-Telegraph. Last night she got change at the grocery store of Sam Klein (bless his heart), 51 South Thirty-second street, South Side. And lo! she had brought home the bacon.

OFFICER LUCKY

Officer Mike Jansen, 36 South Main street, West End, dropped into Lackin's drug store, 430 Main street, the other day. What was his embarrassment when he discovered he had his paws on a Benevolent Bean!

Today's best in M47333477D. Four and seven is eleven; four and three is seven; I know my arithmetic, folks.

WATSON HURLS TARIFF BILL ULTIMATUM

Republican Floor Leader Says Measure Must Be Passed by 1930 or Never

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The new tariff bill must be enacted into law by next New Year's day at the latest or the Republican leadership in Congress will seriously consider its abandonment.

This was the virtual ultimatum served on the Senate today by Senator James E. Watson (Rep.), of Indiana, the majority floor leader. He indicated the bill would be abandoned and all tariff revision postponed indefinitely if the pending tariff battle in the Senate is dragged out into the new year.

"If this bill is not a law and signed by the President on January 1 next, we will not permit the Democrats to jockey it through the next regular session," said Watson.

The Republican leader indicated there would be important legislation pending in the next regular session which would be given preference over the tariff. He may have had in mind a possible naval disarmament treaty, growing out of the approaching visit of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain.

The Democratic tariff-makers smiled at Watson's ultimatum. They indicated a belief the Republican leadership would never abandon the bill, so long as the industrial increases are retained in it.

GIRL'S CHARGES HOLD OFFICER

struck her with his fist, knocking her down, and otherwise mistreating her. The building was afterward learned to be the fire-damaged Guffey mansion, Fifth and Morewood avenues.

Screams of the girl brought the three men, Andrew Gallen, 5012 Kincaid street, and M. J. Twisdan, 314 Oakland avenue, who were passing in an auto, and Calvin A. Stiffney, Belmar place, Swissvale, taxi driver. At their approach the policeman fled.

THREATENED WITH GUN

The three men testified that after identifying the location of the attack, they followed the officer, taking the girl with them. When they met Patrolman McDermott he drew a revolver and threatened them, they said.

The girl was taken to Oakland police station, where she told her story. Later McDermott was arrested and identified by the girl. She was taken to Homeopathic Hospital for treatment.

partment, saying "He sat three times in three years in Criminal Court and could have remedied any conditions against which he complains, if they exist, by ordering a grand jury investigation." Malone, he pointed out, did not assail the police until he became a candidate for mayor, although he was president of Council.

3. President of Council James F. Malone, speaking in the Baptist Temple Church, Frankstown avenue and Collier street, attributed the broken-down condition of the municipal government to the present Mayor. The candidate pointed out that he had protested vigorously about conditions here, as public records would show.

"There must be no connection between the police department and those crimes which strike directly at the security of the home and the safety of our children," Judge Martin said last night.

ATTACKS GAMBLING

"We cannot encourage slot machines, lottery gambling, and other forms of political protected crime, and at the same time keep our children free from the temptations which arise from these crimes. Political protection of crime must be ended before we can get very far in establishing a real government."

"There is only one way in which this can be done," Judge Martin continued. "Prosecutions of crime are a slow and tedious way to stop it. A police department which is kept free from political control can check more crimes in a month than can be prosecuted and punished in a year. Once the police department is given to understand that there is a mayor in Pittsburgh who will not countenance these flagrant offenses, they will stop them and stop them at once. The way, therefore, to go about this thing is to put into office some one who will do it. I promise you that I will do it."

CHARGES POLITICS

Averbach declared that both Councilman Malone and Judge Martin are attacking the police and the organization for political purposes only.

"We hear Judge Martin shouting against the organization," he said. "He objects to the payroll taking part in politics. When he ran for district attorney in 1923 he had the support of both the city and county payroll. We didn't hear a whisper of resentment from him because of that support then. The so-called payroll support seems to be all right, from Judge Martin's standpoint, as long as he has it, but it is a great public wrong when it is back of some other candidate."

Mayor Kline was faced with a deficit when he entered office, said the speaker. This deficit was "the result of miscalculation on the part of city council, of which Malone was a member."

"Both candidates opposed to Mayor Kline are so anxious to get the office that apparntly they are willing to promise you anything, even things which border on the absurd," he declared.

MALONE SPEAKS

"The responsibility for the present broken-down condition of the municipal government in this city is attributed to the present mayor," declared President of Council Malone. "He is the one charged with the duty of enforcing the law. As president of council I protested vigorously about conditions in Pittsburgh, as the public records will show.

"Judge Martin, as a judge of Common Pleas Court, having criminal jurisdiction as a sitting judge of the Criminal Court, had power to investigate conditions if he had been sincere in his desire to do so.

"The policy to which I am committed involves giving to the people of the city of Pittsburgh an efficient, economic, and courteous administration erected upon the ideal of high service."

NAVY PARITY NOW HINGES ON DATE

U. S. and Britain Discuss When Agreement Will Be Effective; Study Details

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. (AP.)—The British-American naval discussions have advanced to a point where a specific time is being sought for attainment of the equality in sea power which already has been agreed upon by Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes. The expectation here is that some year between 1934 and 1940 will be selected.

Under the parity agreement, not only the battleships and airplane carriers covered in the Washington arms limitation treaty, but cruisers and other categories of vessels of the two navies are to be brought to a level of equality in strength.

DIFFERENT FACTORS

The problem, considered on the basis of present building programs of the two governments, involves many factors and experts have almost as many opinions of the probable answer. As these programs now stand, Great Britain would have a cruiser superiority of about 80,000 tons in 1940, which would be reduced to 60,000 if the British made permanent MacDonald's action suspending work on two 10,000-ton ships.

"YARDSTICK" TEST

Officials here expect an agreement on the basic factors to be reached in London in a few weeks, after which Japan, France and Italy will be consulted as to participation in a five-power naval conference through which they will be rounded out and made effective. The time and place of such a conference remain to be decided, while announcement of a basic accord between the United States and Great Britain may be made, it is thought, to coincide with the visit of Prime Minister MacDonald to Washington.

Turner Flying Over U. S. After Record

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Capt. Roscoe Turner, with four passengers, took off from here at 6:21:21 a. m., Eastern daylight time, today in an attempt to break the East-to-West transcontinental flight record.

The record Capt. Turner seeks to lower is 19 hours 10 minutes and 32 seconds, held by Capt. Frank M. Hawks. Capt. Turner planned to stop for fuel at Cincinnati, Tulsa and Albuquerque. His destination is Glendale, Cal. He flew here Wednesday from Glendale in 19 hours 53 minutes. The flight was to demonstrate the feasibility of one-day transcontinental passenger air service.

John Coolidge Plans To Wed in September

WHEN the she-wolf adopted little Romulus and Remus, the babies did well. They probably had something of Mussolini in them.

But when the power trust adopts a newspaper, on a cold cash basis, that newspaper finds it hard to digest the new kind of milk.

JOHN C. EASTMAN died in Chicago, leaving the Chicago Journal behind him.

The power trust said: "Come, little Chicago Journal, I shall adopt and protect you, and teach you to say nice things about your foster-father."

BUT the little Chicago Remus-Journal is dead. After the wake, it will reappear as a tabloid. You can't discourage the power trust, which has plenty of money.

But why Chicago, refusing to accept a trust-financed newspaper, full size, should accept o e half size, is not clear.

Why the Chicago Daily News, usually intelligent, should hold so poor an opinion of Chicago is another puzzle.

PITTSBURGH FLIER FAR AHEAD

Holds 40-Minute Advantage On Arrival at Wichita; Men Speeders in Spokane

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 24.—(INS.)—Still led by Louise McPhetridge Thaden, blonde Pittsburgh aviatrix, who was 40 minutes ahead of her nearest rival in elapsed time, contestants in the women's California-to-Cleveland $25,000 air derby took off in a cloudy sky for Kansas City today.

Negotiating the Tulsa-to-Wichita stretch 47 minutes, Mrs. Thaden tightened her grasp on first place for heavy planes. Phoebe Omlie, of Memphis, kept a comfortable lead in the light ship division.

THEA WITHOUT LICENSE

Ruth Nichols, of Rye, N. Y., was the second arrival from Tulsa and Gladys O'Donnell, Long Beach, Cal., was the third.

15,000 AT FIELD

An overheated motor brought down Vera Walker, of Los Angeles, 20 miles from Wichita. She ascended again, missed the city and surprised 15,000 spectators at the airport by breezing in from the north.

The elapsed time from Santa Monica to Wichita: Louise Thaden, 13:25:23; Gladys O'Donnell, 14:05:39; Ruth Nichols, 14:33:09; Amelia Earhart, 14:48:09; Phoebe Omlie, 16:30:16; Ruth Elder, 18:06:13; Edith Foltz, 18:30:38; Neva Paris, 19:54:34; Mary von Mack, 19:15:14; Thea Rasche, 20:05:55; Opal Kunz, 24:14:23; Vera Walker, 25:14:25; Edith Miller, 27:21:28.

PECOS, Tex., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Bobbie Trout, who landed here last night after a two-hour and ten-minute flight from El Paso, took off at 6:25 a. m. today for Fort Worth, in continuation of her race in the Santa Monica to Cleveland women's air derby. She had been delayed by plane trouble.

THEA RASCHE ELIGIBLE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The Commerce Department today denied that officials of the Santa Monica to Cleveland air derby had been requested to remove Thea Rasche, German aviatrix, from the race.

Edward P. Howard, chief of air regulations of the department, said that no such request had been sent. He added that Miss Rasche's aviation pilot license, which was reported to have expired July 15, still had nearly a year to run.

SPEEDERS READY

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Eight of the nine speed planes which started in the $6,000 Portland (Ore.) to Cleveland air derby were tuned up and on the starting line here today for a take-off to Missoula, Mont., the third lap, with only 14 seconds separating the two leaders in elapsed time.

Clarence Bates, of Milwaukee, Wis., was put out of the race when his plane cracked up near Veil, Ore., in the second lap of the race, from Walla Walla to Spokane, yesterday.

T. A. Wells, of Wichita, Kan., first to land here, was set to take off first. Charles Holman, of St. Paul, second to reach Spokane, but leading Wells by 14 seconds in elapsed time, was to follow in one minute.

The other six entrants were to take off in the order of their arrival, at one-minute intervals, as follows: Tex Rankin, of Portland, Ore.; W. H. Emery, of Bradford, Pa.; Lieut. W. B. Clark, of Portland, Ore.; Maj. G. H. Eckerson, of Springfield, Ore.; Dick Rankin, of Portland, Ore., and Snyder Hall, of St. Louis.

PARADE MARKS OPENING OF AIR SHOW

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The ninth annual national air races and aeronautical exposition cleared preliminary barriers for the opening ceremonies today with nine long distance derbies, 35 closed-course races and exhibition of the best examples of air craft production included in the program for the ten-day event closing September 2.

The women's derby, first of its kind and the first of the races, faced two more days of flying from Wichita, Kan., before landing at Cleveland Monday at the close of the race from Santa Monica, Cal. An overnight stop at Spokane, Wash., in a race from Portland, Ore., found the first men's derby on the second day of the flight, which closes Tuesday. The start of the second men's derby from Miami-Miami Beach today completes this week's schedule for races from a distance.

MARTIAL LAW IN PALESTINE; 20 KILLED

Warships, Troops Sent to Jerusalem to Quell Riots Between Jews and Arabs

International News Service.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—Martial law has been proclaimed at Jerusalem as the result of fighting between Moslems and Jews, said a Central News dispatch from that city this afternoon.

According to the same source the dead are believed to number 20. More than 100 have been wounded.

British warships have been ordered to Palestine from Malta by the admiralty.

WARSHIPS ON WAY

Following an announcement by the admiralty that the battleship Barham and the cruiser Sussex have been ordered to Palestine, a Central News dispatch from Malta said that the aircraft carrier Courageous was proceeding to the same destination.

According to the Central News, the remainder of the British Mediterranean fleet is under orders to keep in readiness for sailing instructions.

Cairo advices to the evening newspapers said that both British and Italian troops are being sent to Palestine.

SHOPS CLOSED

Following a two-hour battle between hundreds of Moslems and Jews, officers of the British protectorate ordered all inhabitants indoors at 6:30 p. m. yesterday. All shops were closed, and the population was in a state of suppressed excitement as armored cars moved slowly through the streets.

The most serious riot, occurring when a crowd of Moslems invaded a Jewish house in Damascus Gate, followed a number of demonstrations at the famous wailing wall. Groups of aged Jewish worshipers were assaulted and stoned while kneeling in front of the wall, and excitement ran high through the city when the attacks became known.

REDS STIR TROUBLE

Communists throughout Palestine have exploited the events of the last few days, it is reported, calling upon Jews throughout the protectorate to "break down British imperialism." With the population tense because of fears of a general outbreak between Moslems and Jews, these communistic activities have presented the British authorities with a serious problem.

DRY CRUSADER ACCEPTS CALL

The Rev. Marna S. Poulson, of East Orange, N. J., former superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, has accepted a call to the First Congregational Church of McKeesport, trustees announced today. He will assume the pastorate October 1.

The church has been without a pastor several months, due to the resignation of the Rev. Stanton E. Yoder, who was called by a Sharon congregation.

Mr. Poulson, who attracted nation-wide interest during his five years as head of the anti-saloon forces in New Jersey, was the one who recommended Abe Weinberg as as investigator to William L. King, missing Pittsburgh vice crusader and head of the now defunct Citizens League. His attacks on United States Senator Edge and Gov. Alfred E. Smith before and during the last national campaign featured the dry league's activities in the East.

COOLIDGE GIVEN HONOR CROSS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Former President Coolidge has been decorated with the highest award of the United States Flag Association, the Cross of Honor.

The honor was given to Mr. Coolidge "in recognition of invaluable service" as the first honorary president general of the association, while he was chief executive of the nation, it was announced here yesterday. President Hoover has succeeded him as honorary president general.

The citation said that Mr. Coolidge gave the organization "prestige that broadened its influence and enabled it better to achieve its purpose of fostering reverence for the flag of the United States and spreading understanding and developing appreciation of the ideals, principles and institutions symbolized by that flag."

Col. James A. Moss, president general and originator of the flag association, praised Mr. Coolidge for giving his indorsement to the flag association and accepting an honorary office.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was the first man to receive the Cross of Honor of the association. The presentation was made by former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, one of the founders of the association, the day after Lindbergh returned to America from his flight to Paris.

This medal also was conferred here June 9 by Vice President Curtis upon the 36 boy and girl flag champions of the United States, regional winners in the first annual flag contest of the association, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers.

CUDAHY SCION FINED $5,000

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Michael J. P. Cudahy, 21, son of the late Jack Cudahy, meat packing official, today faced a fine of $5,000 recommended by a jury which last night found him guilty of driving an automobile while intoxicated. Sentence will be pronounced Tuesday. The court is bound to the decision of the jury in fixing the fine, which came after three hours of deliberation.

Four witnesses testified that Cudahy was intoxicated. His mother and his bride of several weeks, the former Muriel Evans, film actress, took the stand, denying the charges.

Big Stone Falls From School, Quake Blamed

BRADFORD, Pa., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—An 800-pound block of sandstone, part of the coping directly above the entrance of the four-year-old High School Building here, crashed 60 feet to the ground. The accident was attributed to an earthquake which jarred this section of the state recently.

Examination of the building disclosed three other cracks in the upper part of the structure. The quake also was blamed for them. Had school been in session, the accident might have resulted in loss of life, officials said.

was raining at the time and the man loitered in the bank awhile. He said he wanted to drive to Philadelphia and hoped it would quit raining. He would go outside at times.

GRASPED BY ROBBER

"About 4:15 I wanted to take some mail to the post office. I had already locked one door into the bank, since we close at 3 o'clock, but he was standing in the vestibule and I could not close the outer door. As I unlocked the one door to go out, he quickly pushed his way in and grasped me by the throat. I started to shout at him and he pulled a revolver out of his pocket. Threatening my life, he put his arm around my waist and carried me to the vault. I had already locked the inner door and he demanded the key. After grabbing several bundles of currency, but overlooking considerable more, he slammed the door and ran. He failed to lock it and I was able to push my way out and flee to the post office, about 300 feet away, and give the [illegible] to C. N. Jeffreys, the president of the bank and postmaster. He called to police at Uniontown and nearby towns."

TOWN AWAITING MAIL

Addison is about 25 miles from Uniontown and has about 400 population. There is no police officer. Many persons were on the streets at the time of the holdup, the greater number at the postoffice waiting for the mail to arrive at 4:30 p. m. They saw the robber drive away, but in the confusion that followed could not tell whether the car bore a Pennsylvania or West Virginia license. Neither could an accurate description of the car be found.

FIND MAN SLAIN, BODY IN AUTO

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 24.—Leon Rotto, 24, of Burgettstown, was found slumped over the steering wheel of his automobile with a bullet in his heart. The machine was parked on a side road near Muse, a mining town close to Canonsburg.

Robbery as a murder motive was discarded on finding the man's watch and money in his clothing. No weapon was found.

Powder burns on the man's shirt led to the belief that Rotto was murdered by some one who had been in the car with him.

County Detectives William B. Dinsmore and Frank A. Creps are investigating, assisted by Corp. H. C. Johnson, of the State Police.

Johnstown Mayor Asks Appeal Delay

First Returns Received In Mayoralty Poll

Returns in the mayoralty straw vote poll of Pittsburgh conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, the first of thousands of ballots expected to be recorded, began coming to the poll headquarters today.

At the same time the canvass was extended to three additional city wards and 10 wards are now comprised in the distribution of ballots by mail.

Sentiment of voters in all sections of the city will be ascertained by the poll. Downtown, East End, North Side and South Side wards are included in the first 10 wards being canvassed.

The ballots showing the choice of the voters among Richard W. Martin, Charles H. Kline and James F. Malone, candidates for the Republican nomination, do not reveal the identity of the persons casting them. The utmost secrecy is preserved in the poll.

Each day's returns will be tabulated and the results announced the following day, together with the standing of the candidates.

GRAF, TOSSED AND TWISTED, RIDES OUT WORST GALE

ZEP BUCKS LIKE BRONCHO IN STORM

Plunges Through Ominous Clouds, While Lightning Threatens for First Time

By KARL H. VON WEIGAND,

World-renowned newspaper correspondent, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin on its first trans-Atlantic cruise, and who is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—8 P. M. (7 A. M. Eastern Daylight Time.)—The mighty Graf Zeppelin won the first bout with the storm kings of the unconquered Pacific tonight.

It was the worst storm since we left New York on the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World flight. It exceeded in force the Atlantic storm, when we were crippled out over Bermuda on the first trans-Atlantic flight. It was short and sharp, intense and dramatic.

Karl Von Wiegand

We caught up with the storm which held the Graf prisoner at Kasumigaura. Black and ominous clouds from which lightning played seemed to warn us to go back, and barred our way.

Capt. Flemming had the bridge, but Dr. Eckener, Capt. Lehmann and Capt. Von Schiller were all there, too. Dr. Seilkopf was at the weather chart, Navigator Pruss was at the navigation desk while Chief Navigator Wittemann, who with Pruss is the most expert helmsman, himself took the all important elevator wheel.

Dr. Eckener ordered the ship to a higher altitude with the automatically valved gas, so that the Graf would not be carried up in the storm and static clouds and have to valve the gas there, which might ignite. Then we came down again.

Antenna Rolled Up

The wireless antenna, trailing several hundred feet below, was quickly rolled up by the operators, in order that no sparks would be thrown.

With these precautions, the ship was veered sharply off its course to the southeast, and plunged into the inky black wall at the point Dr. Eckener thought was the weakest.

We were caught in an up-rushing current of tremendous force, and the Graf was carried up more than 300 feet in a few seconds. Then it plunged downward like a rock.

Wittemann's skilful handling of the elevator wheel quickly had the ship at an even keel, at 9,000 feet above the turbulent Pacific, while the glare of lightning was our footlight in this great drama of aerial achievement.

The Graf bucked like a broncho jumping stiff legged, or trying to jump over a mountain. It all came quickly. Half of the passengers had no idea what was going on and two of them slept through it all.

Commander Rosendahl and Lieut. Richardson, with William B. Leeds and a few others, were hanging out of the windows watching the play of the elements, it being the first time that the big German airship ever encountered real lightning.

Emotions Hidden

The Japanese naval and army observers, Kusaka and Shibata, sat as unemotional as statues, while Shirai, the Japanese correspondent who yesterday frankly admitted that he was "scared to death," did not reveal the slightest emotion.

Lady Drummond Hay came from her cabin, her eyes sparkling and with color in her cheeks that is rarely seen except when danger is present.

Commander Eckener came from the bridge into the dining room and seemed to be feeling in good spirits as he announced:

"We have broken through. The worst is over."

There was a queer little note of triumph in his voice, as he told his charges that his good ship had weathered the worst storm of our whole trip thus far.

The battle of the air lasted scarcely five minutes. The Graf settled down to a level keel as if content with its victory. Dr. Eckener had gone 20 miles off his course, thus cutting through the edge of the storm.

At dinner the commodore entered into lively repartee with Lady Hay, complimnting her meanwhile on her poise and coolness. To Baron Hayashi, grand chamberlain to the Japanese emperor, Dr. Eckener had described Lady Hay as "the bravest passenger I have ever had."

No Place for Plane

After we had gotten safely through the storm William B. Leeds remarked:

"It was a most interesting experience. The ship was beautifully handled, but thank goodness I didn't have to fly an airplane through it."

Capt. Lehmann laconically remarked:

"It did look a bit ominous but it wasn't so bad."

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—(via Otchishi Radio).—At 6 o'clock this evening, we were 150 nautical miles or 180 land miles directly east of Kasumigaura Air Station, from which we took off less than three hours ago.

We were then entering a shallow area of depression, and endured a slight shaking, but nothing exceptional. The white-capped Pacific tossed beneath us, blown up by a north-northeast wind.

Not Superstitious

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—(by Carrier Pigeon).—It was exaactly 3:13 p. m. (2:13 a. m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time) today when we "let go." We began to rise slowly and easily, with the cheers and waving of the enthusiastic Japanese and a few foreigners who had gathered at the field.

That "13" came into the time of departure because of the slowness with which the Japanese ground crew understood the order to "let go." But we are not superstitious.

It was a nice takeoff. Commander Rosendahl, just in from the bridge, says the course at this moment is direct east. How refreshing this air after the heat of Tokio. Everyone is delighted to be on the way to Los Angeles.

Dr. Seilkopf, the weather expert, tells me we have a small depress area ahead over the ocean—a "narrow through" he calls it. Dr. Eckener proposes to buck through it as it moves too slowly for us. We will have to push our way out.

The Junkers plane Europe, which Baron Von Huenefeld flew to Japan, escorted us to the sea. We crossed the shoreline of Japan into the Pacific at 3:38 in the afternoon (2:38 a. m. Eastern Daylight Time).

Bands Blare Farewell

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—(Special radio and cable.)—At 2:40 Friday afternoon, the motors were being tuned up, whistles were screaming and hoarse commands were sounding as the big doors of the hangar at Kasumiguara Field opened backwards. At last we were ready to leave the big air dock.

The windcock atop the hangar sagged, showing that the wind at last permitted us to get the gigantic bird from its cage, after being held up more than a day. The band struck up the Japanese and German national anthem; at a table in the corner of the dock the Japanese officers and Dr. Eckener and his crew are assembled, once more amid the clink of glasses and rousing "Banzais!"

The benches were drawn out from beneath the Graf, and we floated out into the air again. The hasty farewells followed of Dr. Eckener and the Japanese air and naval commanders, whose unsurpassable courtesy, kindness and co-operation cannot be exaggerated.

Commander Araki, commandant of the air station and the airship division, and Lieut. Commander Fujiyoshi, the Friedrichshafen-to-Tokio observer, came to bid me goodby, wishing us a safe, rapid and happy voyage to Los Angeles.

Passengers Happy

The passengers were happy. They had just returned in naval motorcars from an unusually delightful luncheon in a Japanese village several miles away, arranged by W. E. Koch, of the Hamburg-American Lines.

The nattily-dressed Japanese naval landing crew of 500 lined up along the ship. Dr. Eckener satisfied himself that the wind conditions were suitable for bringing the ship from the hangar.

"After that," he said, "the Graf will be able to take care of itself."

Experience has again shown here that terminal facilities and docking arrangements must of necessity keep pace with the development of the airship, which so far has not been the case because there have not been sufficient dirigibles.

The low temperature lessened the lifting capacity of the ship, and Commander Eckener ordered several hundred pounds of weather ballast dropped. Then he told me:

Liners Charted

"We are taking a course direct east and probably a little south of east at first to circumvent the edge of a depression. Then we head northeast for the Great Circle route.

"The Dollar Steamship Line gave me a chart which indicates every ship in the Pacific for the next few days from Honolulu north, including seven of the Dollar President liners. This is an invaluable aid."

The ship moved out slowly and easily. The Japanese officers and men were at their very best as they took us clear into the field, but we were still clamped to the docking rails. Then came loud applause from the field around. We were unloosed.

"We're off!" shouted the passengers.

Philadelphian Gets Zep Radio Call For Weather

The message said that the air liner now out over the Pacific on her way from Tokio to Los Angeles, "would appreciate the weather reports in the vicinity of 160 degrees east."

The Graf gave her position at that time as 154 east 39.40 north, and reported "all well."

Couple Ask $20,000 For Death of Boy 6

Suit for $20,000 damages is on file today in Common Pleas Court for the death of a 6-year-old boy, killed by a truck while walking home from school. William Weinheimer and his wife, Marie, of 309 Lincoln avenue, Millvale, filed the action because of the death of their son, William, against Bartsch Brothers Company, truck gardners and florists in Shaler Township, and Fred Bartsch, Sr. The boy was on the sidewalk near his home last March 13, the Weinheimers state, when a truck of the defendant company, towed by an automobile by Bartsch, struck him, fracturing his skull.

STORM FURIES FAIL TO SHAKE PASSENGERS

Graf Travelers Dine, Make Merry, After Passing Severe Ordeal in Pacific

By LADY DRUMMOND HAY.

Only woman passenger on Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World-Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—(Via Otchishi Radio)—The possibilities of the unknown were dramatically emphasized when, between 6:45 and 7:15 tonight (5:45 and 6:15 a. m., Eastern Daylight Time), we ran into the worst storm encountered on the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-World Flight.

Almost since our departure, storm clouds had been gathering darkly. Commander Eckener casually warned the passengers they might expect a shaking. It was the same storm that delayed us last night from taking off. Now, we have caught up with it.

Lady Hay

The skies grew darker, looming ominously black on the lowering horizon. Light clouds scudded past, and the illuminated airship took the weird fantastic forms of ghouls whirling forever in the emptiness of purgatory.

Suddenly, the storm furies caaught us in their maelstrom. The airship quivered and shook, and with dives wrenched itself free from their murderous embraces. Arrogant in its strength, the Zeppelin repulsed the sinister Pacific wind and lightning gobs, who were unable to wait until we were farther in their unexplored domain before trying to claim the Graf—and us—for their own.

First Star Hailed

The storm was snort, if sharp. There was great excitement at the glimpse of the first star, glittering through obscurity. The lightning continued at varying distances, the first lightning the Zeppelin has ever been called upon to face.

The lightning, however, held no anxiety for Dr. Eckener, who was in the highest good humor at dinner. His table guests were Von Wiegand, Dr. Seilkopf, Col. Iselin, Gerville, the French newspaperman, and myself.

The dinner was excellent. But, best of all, Dr. Eckener enjoyed as a connoisseur a glass of sherry from Walter Spiel, the famous gourmet restaurateur of Munich, Germany. He also presented Mr. Von Wiegand and myself a choice basket of liqueurs.

Falling night lowered its curtain upon Japan and its flowery colorful incense, fragrant of the East. Our faces and thoughts were turned to beckoning California. Between us and the Golden State lies the great Pacific, never yet conquered by aircraft in non-stop flight, nor has any woman ever flown the Pacific. I am to be first.

The Zeppelin seems so much like "home" to me that I find it difficult to realize we are on an epoch-making, pioneer adventure. It seems so natural to be in the little cabin and at table with Dr. Eckener, served with delicious meals cooked by the rubicund Manz, served by Steward Kufkis and young Ernst.

Chats of Gourmets

Dr. Eckener claims the greatest gourmets and chefs in the world are masculine, because women are too economical with their materials. He recounted a personal incident, when he cooked a delicate dish, acceptable to his sister-in-law, by "using plenty of butter—more than any woman would think of using." All this with a humorous wrinkling of his handsome, weather-beaten face.

To the other side of the Commander sat Von Wiegand, with whom he discussed technically the meteorology which caused the recent storm. As we watched, the fall moon rose above the horizon. Blood-red and streaked black clouds were all there, like a Japanese print.

Col. Iselin came up, crying excitedly, "Have you seen the American moon! It's bigger than any moon I've ever seen in Europe, and different!"

The only flaw in my complete happiness these days is the thought that all good things must end, and New York will see the end of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight—a glorious adventure and the thrill of a lifetime.

More Rough Weather

Even with this storm conquered, more rough weather is predicted for tomorrow, but no one minds. Dr. Eckener just came to my cabin and said, "Good night. I am going to bed." That means all is well. I might have known he was going to sleep tonight—he always drinks a glass of red wine, preparatory to a night's rest, or white wine preparatory to a night's anticipated vigor.

Our mascot, the black cat belonging to Knorr, is missing. It disappeared the first day at Kasumigaura, and a frantic search brought no result. Dr. Eckener says it must be on the airship somewhere, but Knorr believes his mascot deserted him, and remained in Japan.

Japan Fades

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 24.—(By carrier pigeon.)—Japan, like a lovely mirage, beckons tantalizingly from the fading distance. The gardenlike country with its doll-like houses was a wonderful panorama. We have just come out of a beautiful dream of a flowery Utopia, where everyone is kind, smiling, helpful and courteous.

Four great airplanes, like giant dragonflies, heralded us back again to the world of reality. It is a happy world—this world of the Zeppelin.

We were all glad to be "home" again in our cozy cabins. We unpacked an amazing miscellany of acquired possessions, ranging from fruits and geisha house fans to ceremonial sweet cakes, scroll pictures, kimonos, silk Japanese dolls and other precious souvenirs. They were all queer indications of the purchasers' tastes and requirements.

The Zeppelin went over the coast at 3:38 p. m. (2:38 a. m. Eastern daylight saving time) and our four escort planes and giant Junkers Europa flew right under us, waving good-bye with German and Japanese flags.

This first night of the Pacific, over which we must fly to Los Angeles, certainly did fill us with emotion.

Camping Out

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 23.—(By Special Radio and Cable).—The ill wind blowing the Graf Zeppelin a slight mishap and delay blew the passengers the spice of unexpected adventure. When it was certain last night that we were unable to start, we just camped out in the Zeppelin.

As the kitchen heating is dependent upon the running motors, breakfast and coffee this morning were brought from miles away.

As the morning progressed, the atmosphere at the air field became more and more informally jolly. Dr. Eckener was seated in his chair at midfield, holding a sort of court with the passengers seated on the grass about him, listening to his weatherwise remarks as he sniffed the wind and gazed at the clouds with uncannily astute eyes.

WILKINS POINTS PACIFIC COURSE

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS,

Famous explorer, who crossed the Atlantic aboard of Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World-Flight.

Although Commander Eckener slightly changed the early part of his scheduled course, so as to avoid storms which were increasing in venom to the north, we will veer back to our north route. Starting directly east from Kasumigauri Air Field we flew at fairly good speed for four or five hours and then began to bend a little to the north so that without extending the distance of our trip by any noticeable figure, by the time we are 12 hours away from Japan we will be out of the hot weather we experienced during our stay in the hospitable land of flowers.

Sir Hubert Wilkins.

Whatever regret there was on the part of the passengers over the delay we experienced due to the accident in our first attempt to take off, it was heartily overcome by the fact that there was an extra day given us to collect a few things which we had forgotten and to see a few more sights.

But last night arond 9 o'clock as we approached the hangar for our last vigil awaiting favorable weather to get away, we were again concerned about our chances. Two small local storms with lightning, north and south of the hangar, made things in the distance appear extremely unfavorable.

The wind in the immediate vicinity was rather strong for a safe start, although we figured that once we got started and had two good hours of flying we ought to find ourselves in better condition.

The rapidity with which the repairs were made to the damaged gondola and engine, speaks well for the Graf's organization and for the foresight of Commander Eckener and his officers.

There is the most remarkable sort of optimism among all the people on board. Everyone is certain that the little accident in the Japanese hangar is the only mishap we will encounter on our flight.

Dr. Eckener is figuring our start by Greenwich time instead of Japanese time, and he wanted to bring the start into Thursday night instead of Friday because many of the crew are superstitious about starting on Friday. Now they are insisting that it would have been better if we had started earlier, for it was so warm when we finally did get away that it had a considerable effect on the lifting power of the Graf.

SERMONETTE

"Fellowship With The Father and The Son, Jesus Christ"

I JOHN 1:3

By REV. H. P. ECKHARDT,
Pastor of St. Andrew's Lutheran Church

"THAT which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ." The beloved apostle has passed the three score and ten milestone. He looks back over the years gone by. And wherever he looks he sees — Jesus only. He has preached Jesus. He has suffered for Jesus. And now, as the journey's end draws near, what message has he to give to the world? Has he taken pen in hand to revise his creed? No, no! The longer a man has communion with Christ and the better he learns to know Him, the more firmly will he be established in his faith, and the more will he feel impelled to declare Jesus unto others. And if, perchance, he feels that he must revise his earlier estimate of Christ it will be a revision upward, never downward.

REV. H. P. ECKHARDT

Such were the blessings John had experienced in Christ and through Christ that his one, all-absorbing desire was to have the whole world of sinners hear about Jesus, accept Him in faith and so come into "fellowship with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ." "Fellowship"—what does that mean? The original word comes from a root which means sharing in common; having all things common; partnership. And so John assures us that by accepting Jesus we come into such a blessed relation with God that we have all things common with Him; that what is His is ours. In other words, when we accept Christ, God takes us into partnership with Himself that we may enjoy His mercy and love and all the blessing Christ has won for sinners. What an overwhelming truth!

All things common with God! Think upon what this means! The great salvation which Jesus worked out with his atoning life and death—it is all ours to have and enjoy every day. The wonderful love of God—it is ours to have and enjoy. The wonderful power of God—it is ours to have and enjoy in all our needs. We can, we should go to Him daily in faith and by the prayer of faith and draw from Him all needed blessings. Then, finally, there is a great inheritance over there—the "mansions in the Father's House." They too, are ours to have and enjoy world without end.

News From Broadway, Hollywood and Local Amusement Notes

PITTSBURGHERS SEND SCREEN SCRIBE NAME OF FELLOW WHO 'PHONES DOLORES

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1929, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 24.

NOT so many calendar hours ago, this flick bureau reported a romance said to be blazing 'twixt Dolores Del Rio and an unknown in Baltimore. Dolores met said unknown whilst person-appearance in that city. Not knowing his name, this bureau wistfully longed to be enlightened.

And was by two pal readers in Pittsburgh. One, signing his (or her) name, M. M. C., pens:

The enclosed clipping will answer your query. The boy is Teddy Joyce. At least that is his stage name. Our local papers said his real name was Legrande Cuthbertson. He was master-of-ceremonies at Loew's Penn Theater for a year and left in the spring to take a similar position in Baltimore.

Dolores Del Rio

The papers also stated that he had flown to Cleveland to see Dolores over a week-end.

Hilda Hoehl, also of Pittsburgh, writes this bureau about Teddy Joyce, who, she tells me, is yclept the Flaming Youth of that city. Mr. Joyce's picture reveals him a nice looking ad, plus a million dollar smile. And this is the boy who is said to have spoken hours to Dolores, via telephone, when she departed Baltimore for Minneapolis, interrupting conversation to play a few saxaphone numbers for her ear alone. More power to you, Teddy.

John Barrymore, Wife Going East

DOLORES COSTELLO and John Barrymore are en route to New York and a quiet rest. At least Mrs. B. intends it to be quiet. She was on the verge of a nervous breakdown when she departed the village. Her nervous condition was brought about by the sudden death of her mother a week or so ago. Both the Costello girls were devoted to her. Dolores was in the midst of a picture at the time. She completed it and departed pronto for Manhattan to be gone some three weeks.

Dolores Costello

Shortly before leaving, Barrymore signed a contract with a ship building firm in Long Beach to construct a 120-foot steel power cruiser for him. The boat will have a cruising radius of more than 5,000 miles. He plans to make extended voyages to the South Seas and other isolated spots. The cruiser is said to cost well over $500,000. Which listens like real money, even to one accustomed to reading of the French debt.

The cruiser will be powered with two 275 horsepower Deisel engines, designed by E. L. Geary of Seattle. Its watery speed is to be 13 knots an hour. Barrymore expects to get the boat in six months. The dining salon, the main salon, staterooms, and quarters for officers and crew will be beautifully fitted. For a half-million smackers why not? Jack also owns a schooner, yclept "The Mariner," twice winner of the transpacific race to Honolulu. It was in this sea-goer that he and Dolores honeymooned to the South Seas.

Watchman Dims Studio Lights

AND still the flick exeks don't make gatemen and watchmen take a grammar school intelligence test for their jobs. Get this one.

A writer was laboring be-times in his office, pounding out a script. Came midnight. In walked the night watchman. Without so much as by your leave, the big punk closed the windows, locked 'em, and turned out the lights.

"Hey" yelled the enraged writer. "What's the big idea?"

"Can't help it, buddy," from the darkness. "I gotta see that the lights are out and the windows closed in all offices. Them's orders."

And he's still alive. And on the same job.

SCREENALITIES: D' ja know that Richard Arlen usta be a motorcycle messenger for a Hollywood film laboratory? Um, eons ago. . . Jack L. Warner, Jr., has a miniature Technicolor movie camera. He shot Harry Cohen, Columbia flick exek, 'tother day and Harry proceeded to make faces into the celluloid. Kept Harry dern busy covering his face on the screen when Jackie, Jr., ran off a reel for guest enjoyment.

STOCK PLAY, PICTURES ON BILL

"The Other Man," a comedy, will be next week's attraction in the Pitt. Kenneth Dajgneau, Pauline MacLean, Mabel Kroman and other of the George Sharp players will be in the cast.

The Penn screen next week will present "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu," featuring Warner Oland, O. P. Heggie, Neil Hamilton and Jean Arthur.

Thomas Meighan now is being seen and heard in "The Argyle Case" in the Stanley. H. B. Warner and Zasu Pitts are in the cast.

Lois Moran is the star of "Words and Music," picture to be seen all next week in the Harris. It also will be shown in the Sheridan Square for three days, beginning Monday.

SCHOOL HOLDS 'OPEN HOUSE'

Friends, alumni and students of the Pittsburgh Academy participated in "open house" held in the institution in the Hanan Building, Wood street, last night. It was a do-as-you-please affair, which started in the forenoon and was featured by a short program in the evening. Dancing and refreshments followed.

J. E. Grady, president of the academy, spoke on "Opportunities for Academic and Business Education in Pittsburgh." Dean Jennie Munro made the address of welcome.

Exhibitions and demonstrations were featured in every class room. Three girl typists demonstrated their skill by starting a typewriting demonstration at 10 words a minute and finishing at the rate of 70 words. Not a single mistake was made. Thee work of the chemistry, physics and biology departments were explained.

Fire Body Charter Hearing Set Sept. 17

Application for a charter for the Braddock Park Welfare and Fire Association has been filed in Common Pleas Court. Judge Ambrose B. Reid fixed September 17 for a hearing. The directors are Michael Kost, Jr., Andrew Ragan, Andrew Stegine, Michael Kost, Sr., and C. J. Balfour.

Woman Who Fell From Window Dies

Mrs. Catherine Appel, 49, of 436 Maplewood avenue, died in St. Joseph's Hospital early today from injuries suffered when she fell while cleaning a window at her home, August 7. Her skull was fractured.

Will Rogers Says

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Aug. 24.

Bobby Jones, the amateur golfer, arrived in our city in a private car—two professional golfers left for the east in a day coach. One of them had a sleeper ticket, and was accused of being an amateur. The poor old professional in all our sports now just prays for the day when he can afford to be an amateur.

Claremore, Okla., has just grabbed off another distinction. It's the only town between Santa Monica and Cleveland that the Cleveland race officials didn't make those poor girl aviators stop at.

Talk about Pyle's bunion derby running through every town that would put up and give anything, this race makes these girls land in every buffalo wallow that has a Chamber of Commerce and puts up a hot dog sandwich. They even made 'em eat with Amon Carter.

Yours, WILL.

Film Sleuth

Thomas Meighan has a detective role in "The Argyle Case," current in the Stanley.

VETS TO SEE CIRCUS ACTS

At the tenth annual veterans' reunion at Kenywood Park, August 31, three circus attractions will be presented for the pleasure of the veterans, according to latest word from the general committee.

Fireworks displays, called the "Spectacle of the Skies," and Mardi Gras dancing to Whitey Kaufman and his recording orchestra's music are features for the guests of the Sun-Telegraph at this get-together.

The "Voice of Kennywood" will broadcast throughout the park music fitting for the occasion, with tunes of '61, '98 and '17 serenading the vets throughout the day. Circus features include the Nine Nelsons, sensational acrobats; the Great Fussner, Abe Goldstein with his dog Teddy, and clowns.

In the evening, the veterans may compete for prizes in the costume parade.

The Legion of Valor and the Bolo Club will be represented at the affair, it was learned yesterday. Representing the Legion of Valor, composed of men who have received the Congressional Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross, will be Robert G. Woodside, Robert S. Cain, Benn Prager, Ray G. Rowbottom, Henry H. Rowan, R. H. Shenkel, Dan McSweeney, George H. Klier and John Dixon.

The committee for the Bolo Club will be Joseph Filbert, Harry Thomas, Fred Oglesby, Frank McClain and George Crawford. Members of the Bolo Club have all served in the Philippines.

Diving Horses, Dogs In Amusement Park

Chambers and Trice, with their troupe of high diving horses and dogs, are a current feature in the National Amusement Park. The animals are said to dive from the top of a 40-foot tower into a shallow pool below.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

Flirtation in the Subway

THE scene is so vivid—how well I remember,
We stood there so close that our hearts beat in tune,

Her eyes were as bright as the stars in December,
Her breath was as fragrant as roses in June,

We said not a word . . . but we looked at each other,
I smiled when her hat rubbed the skin from my face,

I shifted my frame and gave thanks for the space.
—William A. Pratt.

AS IF YOU DIDN'T KNOW

YESTERDAY the dramatic critics gathered in the Friars to honor their retiring confrere, E. W. Osborn, who is Leaving It All after 40 years as a play inspector. The guest of honor sentimentalized about Broadway choosing Jimmy Durante's song title: "Broadway—The Heart of the World!"

"And," said Mr. Osborn, "I am convinced that it is the heart of the world when you merry representatives honor me with this luncheon."

This was very appropriate and all that, but we wished we were the honored guest, so that when it came our turn to talk, we could have reminded them all that Broadway is a place where they never give a dinner to a feller—until he can afford to buy one.

Frank Wolf, one of Philly's theater pioneers, succumbed the other day and a Philadelphia reporter became emotional in this manner: "He died with the words on his lips: 'Run up the curtain. Let the show go on!'"

I don't believe it.

CAPSULE CRITICISM

ADDED to our Crisp Cracks From Critical Cusses Contest is the caustic comment of Art Bossin, of the Toronto Star, who, in reviewing a vaudeville bill, said of the headline act: "The only thing good about it is the orchestra, which doesn't play."

* * *

And the same Art Bossin says that up in Canada they call it "neckin' whoopee."

And Gilbert Gabriel's favorite capsule criticism is the late A. B. Walkley's, who said in a British rag: "A play came to the Savoy last evening called 'A Ghastly Evening'—Precisely!"

THE RETORT PROPER

LOU HOLTZ, the Palace headliner, forwards the one about the youngster who was smoking in front of the theater and a woman stopped to give him a piece of her alleged mind. "Young man," she growled as she shook a finger, "does your mother know that you smoke cigarets?"

To which the kid responded: "And does your husband know you talk to strange men?"

Then there's Fred Allen's very short story about the gangster who before moving from Tenth avenue over to Park sent his revolver out to be pearl-handled.

SOTTO VOCE

H. A. Bruno—It is all swell.

Doris Hardy—Too long.

George Dewey (Wilkes-Barre)—No can do, sorry.

J. M. Bowles—The audience found it vastly entertaining, the critic only intermittently so.

IN HOLLYWOOD

PERHAPS no other group is so sensitive as the film magnates. They have squelched their tormentors and exiled several of them from the gold coast, and Arthur Caesar, whose wit rankled some of them, has soft-pedaled his clown comments and now is enjoying the fruits thereof. Caesar, whose remarks have been vicious at times, has shelved his wisecracks for Big Money. His present agreement calls for $1,750 per week and his new contract will call for $3,000 per.

Bugs Baer, it is said, has decided that he will never resort to a crack that "will offend anyone," although the famous newspaper comedian, who now is in Hollywood, was not reprimanded for any flop quips. George Jessel, however, would rather get a laugh.

The other day a wag poked at a prominent flicker executive whose nose is immensely hooked; "Look at that guy. He reminds me of a pelican," said the clown.

"Shhh, no so loud," chirped Jessel, "he might fly away."

ADD SIMILES

UNSAFE as a one-woman man with a two-time gal . . . Conspicuous as Otto H. Kahn on an opening night. . . Popular as a producer who has a hit or a girl who doesn't have to go home early . . . Feeble as a struggle over a night club check . . . Pious as an interview with Fred Stone . . . Artificial as Fanny Ward . . . Out of date as a mammy song or an imitation of "Frisco". . . More titles than the Guarantee Trust or a new play during rehearsals . . . Dull as the 4th of July in England or a man whose wife doesn't understand him . . . Repulsive as a man who is proud of his bridgework.

It appears that George Jean Nathan, the critic, is apprehensive over the news that Mr. Ziegfeld's "Show Girl" and other shows do not contain chorus men and that hereafter chorus boys will be replaced by "hemen."

"If this sort of thing continues," fears Nathan, "there will pass from the body of 'The American Credo' one of its cardinal doctrines, the doctrine, to wit, that all chorus men are lizzies."

BOO, Y'SELF!

PROBABLY none of the current wisecracking champions could best Wilton Lackaye, who not only is famed for his histrionic powers, but for his snippy retorts. His most famous squelch, perhaps, happened at the Lambs Club after a Lambs Gambol in which Lackaye made his last public appearance. Ben Lyon, the movie favorite, said: "Mr. Lackaye, I saw you tonight, you were grand. Tell me, sir, how does it feel to be such a great actor?" and Lackaye snapped: "You'll never know!"

The other day his man servant brought a copy of Variety, the threatical weekly, to him. "Does it mention me this week?" he asked.

"I'm afraid not, sir," said the lackey.

"Then take it away!!!!" thundered Lackaye.

Among other subjects brought up by a group of locals last night was the plight of Frank Tinney, who is striving to regain his health and prestige. The gab was enlivened when it was told how the former stage star once waited in an alley in Chicago for a critic who had roasted him mercilessly. When the critic was informed that the aggrieved Tinney was outside he went out and beat him up.

A few seasons later the critic enlisted in the war and was commissioned a lieutenant. Upon his arrival in Manhattan, the first superior officer he had to salute was a captain—named Frank Tinney—who considered things squared.

Unscramble Those Anagrambles! Nimble Wits Devour New Game

Sun-Telegraph's Game Makes Them Scratch Their Heads.

ONLY yesterday the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph introduced the exciting game of Unscramble the Anagramble to its readers, and today a flood of letters tell us that it's the most welcome feature of months.

This brand new craze has America's nimble minds all pepped up, and now is the time to learn what this new vogue is all about and how to play it.

Simple, indeed, yet utterly fascinating! You'll find that once you start to play, you'll never stop. That's what happened to America's literary and social lights, and they're telling the world that Unscramble the Anagramble is the thrill of the day.

RULES ARE EASY

The rules are easy. You are given, for instance, the word "rope" and the problem is to unscramble it with the letter "s." The rules of the game do not allow you to make it plural, like "ropes," or a past tense like "roped." It is also imperative that you do not omit any letter of the original word.

You must change the complete meaning of the word by inserting the letter "s" wherever you can, and by rearranging the word "rope" to suit your desires. Thus, to make an Anagramble of "rope" with "s" the word becomes "pores."

Here are a few more Anagrambles to show you how easy the rules are: Unscramble the word "cram" with the letter "e." The Anagramble is "cream." Unscramble the word "task" with the letter "e." The Anagramble is "takes." Unscramble the word "rest" with the letter "e". The Anagramble is "steer."

Now examine the Anagrambles presented here and see how you can unscramble them. Watch for the answers in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph. Every day you will find a new group of clever Anagrales for you to solve.

You'll soon get the swing of it and will probably be making up new Anagrambles yourself. When you get a particularly good one, send it with the answer to the Anagramble Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and it will be published with due credit.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

A NEW scandal seems to pop up every day. The latest is uncovered by an indignant correspondent who reports that at Fourth avenue and Ross street there is a puddle of water, due to faulty paving. The correspondent wrote a three-page letter about the sad affair, in which letter he detailed how he has frantically tried to get the mess cleared up, but there seems to be divided responsibility between the city and county authorities, and nothing about the current outrage is being done.

Sidewalks didn't intend to throw its weight into the controversy until a second letter came in, from the same correspondent, hinting that I refused to touch on the subject because I was in the pay of Russia.

In order to show the correspondent how fearless in these matters this column really is it is necessary, therefore, to write a short note to Director Lang, of the Public Works Department, a good friend, who will understand what a fix columnists get in from time to time.

Accordingly:

Dear Director Lang:

Is there anything you can do about an alleged puddle of water at Fourth avenue and Ross street. The pavement is said to be faulty and is reported dangerous to the taxpayers who must walk in that vicinity. If you can do anything about this Sidewalks will be appreciative, not because it might save a broken ankle or so, but because a repair will stop a certain correspondent from assailing me with letters on the subject.

Yours truly and so forth.

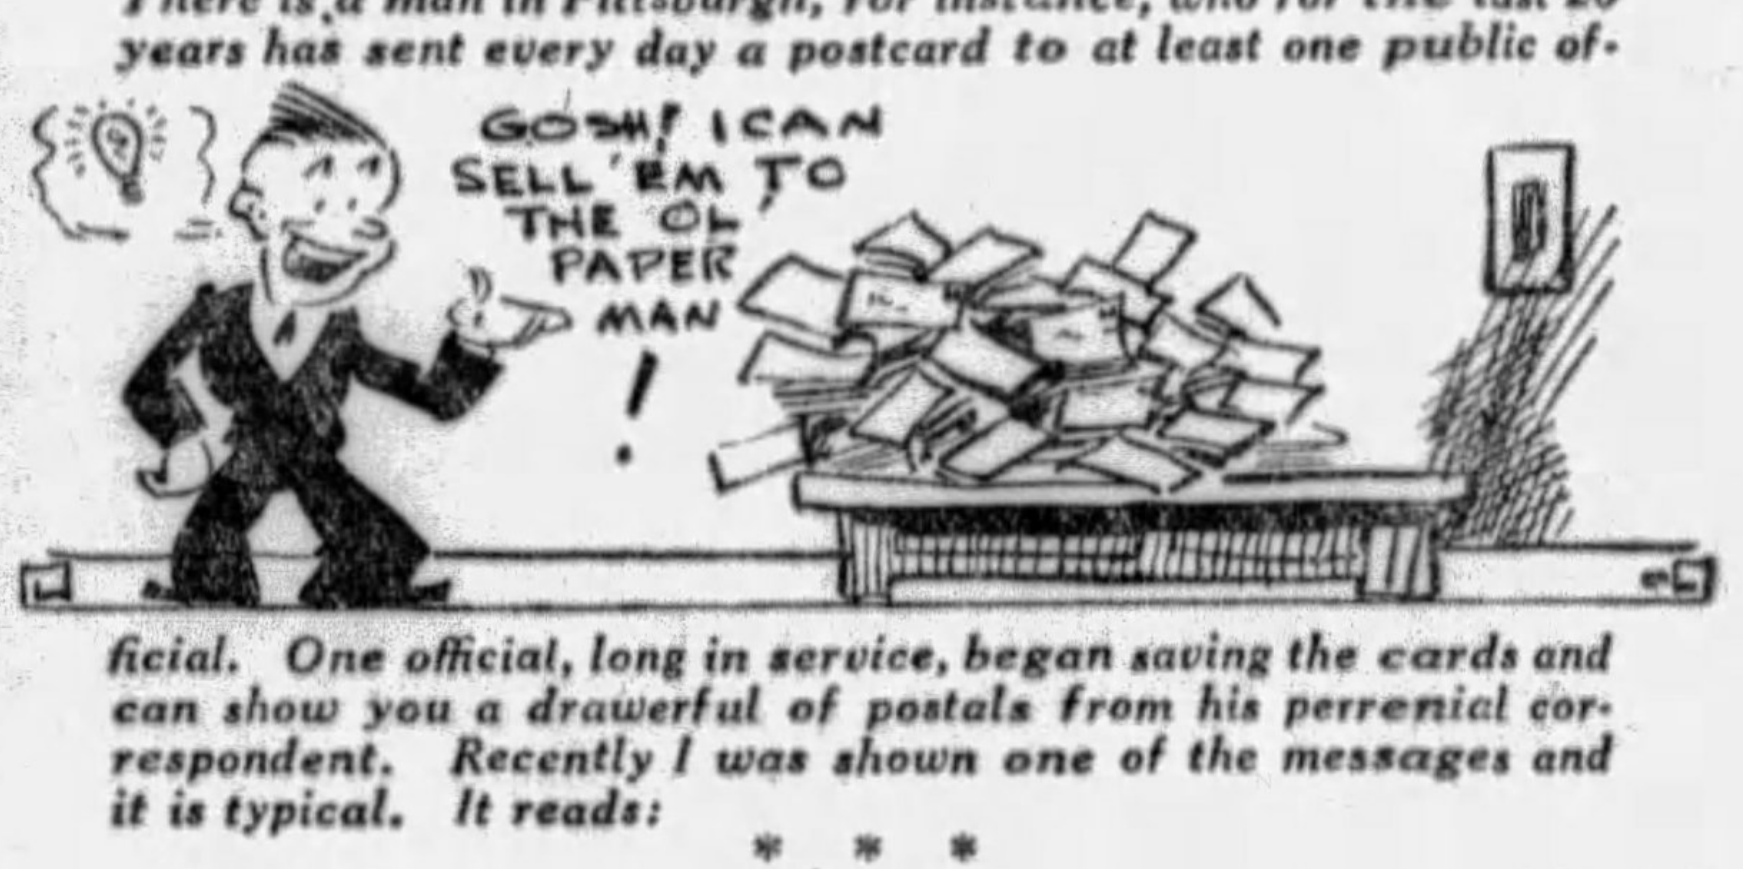
Director Lang will not worry about the letter. Public officials are accustomed to getting letters, mostly complaints. There is a man in Pittsburgh, for instance, who for the last 20 years has sent every day a postcard to at least one public official. One official, long in service, began saving the cards and can show you a drawerful of postals from his perrenial correspondent. Recently I was shown one of the messages and it is typical. It reads:



GOSH! I CAN SELL 'EM TO THE OL' PAPER MAN!

"A REAL Christian democracy of equal moral rights and lawful liberty is an impossibility under the past and present system of Christian faith and morals. The blessed are barren, the best are rabbits, and the rest are Babbitts. Follow me."

Every day at least one public official gets such a message, but the beauty of it is that no one knows just what the postcard writer is driving at.

There is a legend that John Black, superintendent of the county morgue, enters his office, takes off his hat and coat, and asks: "Where's my postcard?"

Life on Monument Hill, since they began cutting the hill away, is a test for would-be sleepers in the district. Operations begin about 6 o'clock in the morning, when the steam shovel brigade strikes up its symphony. This is mingled with a little blasting, which begins relatively light and rises to a crescendo. After this, a parade of heavy trucks comes along, chugging and sputtering, with drivers and workmen yelling orders and directions. About the time one becomes accustomed to the bedlam, according to one resident who submits a detailed report, the baby next door begins crying.

AN eye-doctor in the East End was telling of fitting a glass eye for a client who, after using it for a week, came back and made complaint. "You are dissatisfied?" asked the doctor. "I am," said the patient. "And why?" asked the doctor. "Well for the sufficient reason I can't see through it." This was turned down by True Story Magazine, it is only fair to say.

When the censors cut a talkie the result is little short of a panic for the customers. The movie houses announce why the picture is at times incoherent, but that doesn't help much in unraveling the plot. The censors don't go far enough. How about cutting a few feet out of the women who drop their pocketbooks, unwrap caramels and kick the chairs in front of them to keep time with the music.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Fox, Coon Hound Trials Staged at Sewickley Hunt Club Grounds

WHEN the hills of Sewickley echoed the baying of hounds this morning, didn't you find yourself thinking of scarlet riding coats and English estates, and the good old days of the fox hunt? Of course there're still a few fox hunts, and some of the few are held right near Sewickley, too.

Although there wasn't a fox hunt this morning, there were enough hounds near the Sewickley Hunt clubhouse for several. The Sewickley Hunt was holding hound trials, one for fox hounds and one for coon hounds.

Sport-loving society folks who are home early from their summer wanderings were there.

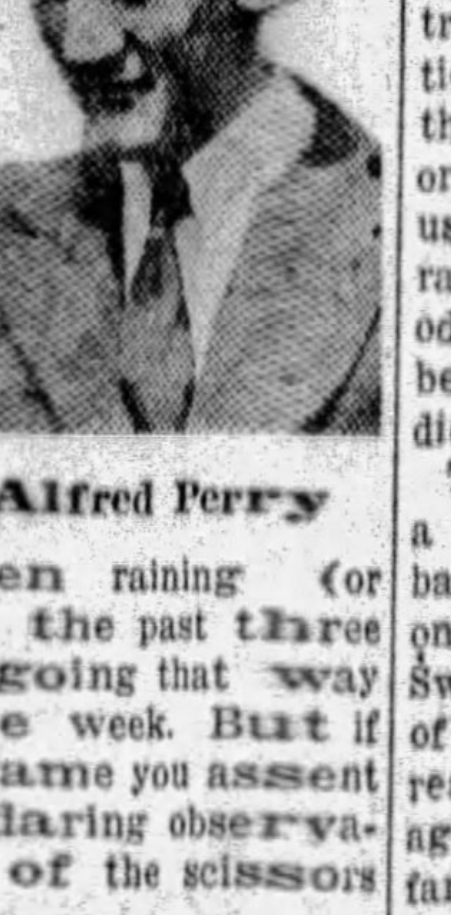
Briton Likes Barbers Here

ALFRED P. PERRY is a young English newspaperman and holder of the Walter Hines Page Fellowship in Journalism for 1929. Under this Fellowship, which was established some years ago by the English Speaking Union of the United States with the object of promoting fuller understanding of America in Great Britain through the medium of the press, British newspapermen are attached for periods amounting in all to one year to the staffs of leading papers in this country. During the three weeks which he will spend as a guest of the Sun-Telegraph Mr. Perry will write his impressions of America and Pittsburgh from day to day.

By ALFRED P. PERRY

I LIKE these Pittsburgh barbers. They do not feel it their duty to keep up a ceaseless chatter to drown the click, click of the shears. They will reply courteously to any observation you may choose to make and even venture a discreet suggestion of their own; but there the matter stops.



Alfred Perry

Contrariwise, the London barber is like a babbling brook. He starts flowing as soon as you get into the chair. His opening shot is almost always the same. "Very wet (or fine) morning, Sir!" Probably it has been raining (or shining) steadily for the past three days and looks like going that way on for the rest of the week. But if you are new to the game you assent courteously to this daring observation and get a nip of the scissors for your pains.

GORE REVIVES HIM

Then he tries horseracing, of which you may know nothing and care less. "I see Twinkletoes is odds on for the 3:30, Sir!" You say "What?" and get your ear gashed.

This seems to discourage him, and for a few minutes he holds his tongue. Then the sight of blood revives his memory and off he starts again. "Terrible affair, that in Chicago, Sir!" "Terrible!" you reply, not having the least idea of what he is talking about, but hoping for the best. "Yes, sir, I had an aunt by marriage who lived in Chicago for many years." This news thrills you. "Yes, sir, she came over here for a time, but she got kind o'lonesome without the bombs. Wonderful how you miss things, isn't it, sir? I remember I 'ad a pet canary once . . . what did you say, sir? Oh, did I nip you, sir?. Very sorry, sir!"

There is only one way to quell a London barber, on the war path. The secret may be useful to American visitors. As soon as you settle down into the chair, open a newspaper and meet all his assaults with a grunt. The paper seems to discourage him; or perhaps it is that he feels no longer compelled by good manners to save you from the perils of introspection.

PREFERRED POKER SINGE

I suspect that the ancient Greek king who would allow none but his daughters to shave him was really trying to escape from the conversation of the court barber rather than the assassin's dagger. True, his order that the young ladies should use a red-hot poker instead of a razor to remove his beard seems odd; but to judge from some barbers I have known, he probably did not notice much difference!

This fear of being slaughtered in a shave recalls to mind the only barber who has figured as a villain on the English stage. He was Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street. This gentleman really lived more than 100 years ago in Fleet street, London, now famous as the heart of the British newspaper world. For many years he talked and prospered; but gradually ugly tales began to go around—how strangers had gone into his shop and had never been seen to come out, and how Todd always kept his windowblinds drawn close.

At last the officers of the law raided the house, and the barber's dread secret was revealed. In his shop he had a special chair in which he always shaved rich-looking visitors who were not known in the neighborhood.

FRISKED IN CELLAR

This chair was clamped to a secret trap-door in the floor, which opened when a hidden bolt was drawn and tipped the customer into a stone cellar 20 feet below, where Todd could pick his pockets at leisure.

The bodies were a difficulty at first, but Mr. Todd was a smart chappie. He cut them up and sold them cheap to an old hag who kept a pastry-cook's next door, where they were converted into the extra special tender pork pies for which she was famed throughout the district.

Such a story was too good to be overlooked by writers of "thrillers" for the stage, and many a London audience has shuddered joyfully at the fiendish chuckle of the demon barber and his sinister "I'll soon polish you off, sir!" to customers in a hurry.

I do not know if Pittsburgh ever has had a demon barber. But the fact that most of them here seem to do their work in glass-fronted saloons looking straight onto the sidewalk makes me doubtful. It is so difficult to avoid ill-natured gossip if you cut a man's throat while a lot of newsboys and peanut vendors are gaping in through the window. But anyway, I would rather be "polished off" by a Pittsburgh barber than by my London friends; for at least I would not have to listen to his chat about the weather before he sent me to a warmer clime.

Buildings Burn At Hermitage, Jackson Home

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Two barns, a corn crib, the carriage house and the boiler house of the Hermitage, historic home of Andrew Jackson, were destroyed last night by fire of undetermined origin. Six fire engines from Nashville saved the main building.

The structure, valued at $1,000,000 aside from its historic interest, is one of the nation's show places. The carriage in which Jackson rode to Washington from Nashville to be inaugurated president was in the carriage house, but was saved by caretakers.

BABCOCK AIDS NAMESAKE

Edward Vose Babcock O'Block, the first baby to be born in South Park, Broughton postoffice, and named for the county commissioner, yesterday received a nice letter and a check from Mr. Babcock. The letter follows:

"Dear Young O'Block:

"Read in the papers that you took a chance and recently jumped into the world with the rest of us fellows and assume you are going to battle with the 110,000,000 other men and women to try to make a worth-while man of yourself.

"With this in mind, am sending you a check, payable to your father, with which to open a little bank account. Deposit it in a good bank and add to it from time to time if you can, and by the time you reach the age of maturity you will have a nice little nest egg to start life with.

"Also see by the paper that you have been given my name in addition to your family name. Hope you will be successful in making this name stand out among men and that you will be the kind of citizen that others will look up to and have respect for.

"It is easy enough to be any old kind of man in this world, but to be an outstanding figure that other men will ape and follow, you must dig and delve and slave and save and keep yourself in an enviable position all the time, so that others will love and admire you. This is what we all call a big, worth-while citizen. We cannot all be a president, we cannot all be a millionaire, but we can all be worth-while respected citizens.

"Wish for you success and attainment in life that will make your father and mother proud of you and your friends love you."

AIR SIGN MARKS OLIVER ROOF FOR FLIERS

18-Foot Aluminum Letters To Keep Pilots From Being Confused in Fog

By MAX HENRICI

First fruit of the campaign to get all towns in this district marked for the guidance of aviators, a large sign "PITTSBURGH" has been put on the roof of the Henry W. Oliver Building.

The sign is 75 feet long, the letters 18 feet high, and the paint aluminum. It can be seen from a great height. There is an arrow pointing to an airport.

You might think there was little likelihood that a flier passing over Pittsburgh would fail to recognize the place. But bear in mind that there are three other cities in Allegheny County besides Pittsburgh—McKesport, Duquesne and Clairton—and a number of boroughs so thickly populated that they would be called cities in the West and South.

In connection with the campaign to get the Pittsburgh district "air-marked" the Sun-Telegraph has told of several recent instances in which signs over towns or the absence of signs played an important part in guiding fliers.

LANDING NEARLY FATAL

One case reported was that of a Pittsburgh business man overtaken by darkness as he was flying home from Conneaut Lake last Saturday evening and forced to alight in a hay field, where he narrowly escaped hitting a drainage ditch.

He said he flew over two towns which he later found were Freeport and Tarentum but could find nothing to indicate what towns they were. If markers had been in evidence, he added, he could have landed without danger in the New Kensington air field.

It develops that Freeport does have a marker, which the flier failed to see—probably, he said today, because it was getting dark, and he was flying low and was not very close to the sign.

The marker is the name "Freeport" in letters 15 feet high on the top of the Freeport Bank and Trust Company Building. Freeport is said to have the distinction of being the first town in the Allegheny Valley to be thus "air-marked."

Selection or Prices Alone Would Never Make Sales Records Such as These

—a Statement of August Furniture Sale Facts

Running well ahead on this most important of homefurnishing events—last year's success (and it was outstanding) eclipsed by the hearty response accorded to this August Sale.

Briefly and tritely, the reason is clear—more people, of course, but rather than that, the fact that those who have come here have been quickly convinced that here is selection and style offering almost unlimited choice among style-right furniture—and at prices so low as to prove irresistible.

Large quantities, to be sure, but of greater importance is the fact that the entire stock is wonderfully well selected.

Now for Monday—

$195 3-Piece Walnut Bed Room Suite

$95

Another record rent asunder—the lowest price we have ever been able to offer—it's good dependable furniture or it wouldn't be here—and you will realize the fact when you see it early Monday. Just 21 suites—full size bed, chest of drawers and vanity in walnut, combined with maple and gumwood. Nicely finished with matched veneerings on all fronts. Manufacturer accepted a lump offer—they go Monday —and will go quickly—at less than half price—$95.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

LOCAL TRADE HITS DULL PERIOD

Seasonal Factors Cause Lull in Commodities; Glass Market Is Active

Commodity lines, both wholesale and retail, are subject to seasonal factors and reports are rather spotty, with collections still far from uniform, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review.

With the grocery line, this month usually is a dull period and some jobbers comment that the dullness is more pronounced than customary. Dry-goods and apparel in the wholesale field are quiet, though retailers are stimulating trade by special sales featuring advance offerings of winter apparel. Industrial activity continues at a good rate, but labor saving equipment has cut into payrolls and in outlying towns purchasing power has been reduced.

JEWEL SALES FAIR

Wholesale jewelers report a fair volume of sales, but complain that demands run mostly to the cheaper and medium grades with better class goods in only limited request. Strictly local collections are fair, but including out-of-town the situation is spotty and receivables show an increase of 10 per cent over last year.

Local equipment in steel specialties and electrical machinery are engaged close to capacity. Forge plants, turning out automobile parts, are in some instances amply covered by contracts and working full shifts.

Window glass plants are planning resumption after a shut down of some weeks. Inquiries are at a better rate, and, with the tariff adjustment, domestic producers are hoping to acquire markets formerly subject to foreign competition. Plate glass, on the other hand, has been exceptionally active with no perceptible decrease in requirements.

FUEL PRICES SAME

Fuel remains comparatively dull and local brokers see but little change for the better, excepting that tonnages for domestic heating are increasing. Pittsburgh district mines have not been able to get much Lake trade. Prices are unchanged; run-of-mine steam coal $1.25 to $1.75 and slack 80 cents to 90 cents. Gas and coking coal quoted up to $1.75 for run-of-mine. The coke market has the same aspects as heretofore, with furnace coke in limited demand at $2.75 at oven and foundry coke in rather poor request, the latter quoted $3.75 up to $4.85, the top figure applying to standard grades.

Spurt in Aviation Interest Shown By Poster

How rapidly the public is becoming air minded is shown by the number of queries received for information about the type of airplane displayed on the current bill-board advertising Chesterfield Cigarets. Salesmen for the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company report that they are kept busy answering the question "What is it?"

As a matter of fact, the artist visited a number of the airports and flying fields in the New York district studying modern airplane design. His final painting represents a monster cabin monoplane combining the newest features of all the leading models used in commercial transport, and embodying some idealistic refinements which the experts declared would inevitable come as the art of aerial navigation advances.

GRAND SHOULD NET $5

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Earnings of F. and W. Grand 5-10-25 cents and $1 stores, Inc., for current year are estimated at about $5 a share on 268,532 shares of common stock outstanding, according to those well posted on company's affairs. This estimate based on the splendid sales showing anticipated for 1929 would compare with actual per share earnings during 1928 of $3.87 a share on the common. Total net income from sales for the year should be around $1,500,000, which would compare with earnings last year of $1,174,915.

The company so far this year has reported sales increases ranging from as low as 30 per cent to as high as 51 per cent over sales of corresponding 1928 month. Average increase in sales of the seven months reached more than 1 per cent, with a volume of $10,782,663 compared with $7,618,566 reported for same period in 1928. Volume in sales for full 12 months this year is expected to go beyond $22,000,000, a figure that would be more than 30 per cent ahead of $17,149,585 registered for full year 1928.

To date there are 91 stores in operation against 81 at the end of last year. Due to a conservative policy in dividend disbursements on common stock excess earnings have been ample enough to take care of opening of new units without at the same time weakening financial status or having recourse to additional financing.

Chicago Line's Net For Quarter Up

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad net income $1,642,931 for June quarter is equal after preferred dividends to $3.27 a share on 337,074 common shares versus $1,510,348, or $3.03 a share on 319,544 common shares in 1928 period.

RESERVE BANK POLICY FAILS UNDER TEST

Experimental Character of Attempt to Control Loans Shown by Rise

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The rise of brokers' loans in the second week after the inauguration of the new program of the Federal Reserve authorities emphasizes the purely experimental character of the new double-edged policy.

In raising the rediscount rate from 5 to 6 per cent, while cutting the buying rate on acceptances from 5¼ to 5⅛ per cent, the Federal Reserve sought to influence the use of bank credit, favoring the business man and agriculturist and penalizing the speculator. It remains to be seen whether credit can be so earmarked; it is very doubtful whether it can. Nevertheless, the double-edged policy was ingenious, inasmuch as it was intended as a moral offset to the seasonal policy of easement started in connection with the movement of crops and the autumn trade expansion. Usually, the Federal Reserve begins to pump about $300,000,000 of additional Federal Reserve credit into the market about this time of the year, and the authorities were anxious that the additional funds be used for business and agriculture, and not for securities speculation.

LOANS GO HIGHER

Nevertheless, after one week's recession, brokers' loans continued their advance to unprecedented peaks. Speculators are more sensitive to the meaning of changes in credit policy than so-called legitimate operators, and are the first to take advantage of new conditions.

Ultimately, the Federal Reserve, unless it is willing to abandon its restrictive policy, may have to resort to a still higher rediscount rate, though an advance during the period of fall commercial expansion would be untimely. The logical time for the Federal Reserve to renew its aggressive tactics against the Wall street bulls would be after the turn of the year, when there would be no danger of starving legitimate business.

The attempt to segregate pools of credit, earmarking some for business as opposed to speculation, represents an attempt to carry political preconceptions into the field of economic activity. As a matter of fact, the stock market is itself a vital part of the business world.

Furthermore, it is erroneous to assume that the stock market necessarily diverts credit from business. It is in fact a channel for drawing capital to business. In the last year, through the sale of additional stock, corporations have financed near-term expansion and have anticipated future requirements for funds.

The chief barriers to further advances in stock prices are the credit situation and high quotations. On the other hand, the high level of business profits for dominant corporations and the good prospects for the remainder of the year at least generate optimistic sentiment.

THREAT TO EXPORTS

Although the Senate tariff bill is more moderate in many respects than the House proposal, it nevertheless is a threat to American export prosperity. Sumner H. Slichter, of the Institute of Economics at Washington, is correct, in my opinion, in pointing out:

"Our exports of manufactured goods are 68 per cent more than our imports and they are growing rapidly, whereas our imports are remaining practically stationary. As far as manufactured goods are concerned, our markets at present are already practically closed to the rest of the world. American manufacturers, in consequence, have a far greater interest in keeping foreign markets open to their products than in still further closing a market which is already 97 per cent closed. In order to shut off an insignificant trickle of foreign manufactures, is it good business for American manufacturers to jeopardize their rapidly growing export trade? Before the present tariff bill was introduced the prospect for a continued increase in our exports was probably as favorable as at any time in the coountry's history. The House bill, however, has radically changed the situation. It has aroused as widespread and as determined an opposition to our trade as any nation has had to face. Most certainly a general upward tariff revision would substantially handicap every American manufacturer in pushing his sales abroad. A presidential veto would be merely a kindness to business."

General Motors, according to Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., the president, is to be more or less of an investment trust itself. In addition to being a holding company for its own wholly dominated divisions, the company has been buying minority interests in other companies at home and abroad.

In interpreting the policy to stockholders, Mr. Sloan said:

"In this connection it might be stated that it is the policy of General Motors to avail itself of opportunities that may develop from time to time not only to broaden its present manufacturing operations at home and abroad, but to add to its general activities in lines with which its organization is more or less familiar, or can constructively deal in the interest of the stockholders. This should result in diversifying the corporation's investments and adding to its profit account."

The recent investments have been in aviation companies at home and in automobile manufacturing concerns in Europe.

Remainder of Year to Enjoy Prosperity

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

IF the stock market still means anything as a barometer of business, things are going to be good for the rest of the year. Most of the leading industries have been exceptionally prosperous so far in 1929 and the securities markets have given concrete evidence of their faith in the fact that American corporations have still better times ahead of them.

The week's sensational stock market came in spite of two factors which might ordinarily have had a depressing influence. The increase in the rediscount rate did not take place so long ago, but it seems to have been forgotten after a scare of very brief duration. Besides this, Friday's fireworks in the stock market came after the announcement of a new peak in brokers' loans.

Investment Trusts.

WHILE pure speculation has undoubtedly been the dominant factor in bringing stocks to their present levels, it must not be forgotten that the actual buying for investment has been tremendous. The great investment trusts have provided an enormous market.

It is true that these organizations derive much of their profits from speculative operations and that they will not necessarily hold stocks forever, but investment trusts do buy with the idea of keeping their holdings over a considerable period and stocks owned by them are in strong hands which will not have to let go as a result of any minor unsettlement.

Incidentally, industry is still supplying the increased funds required for stock market activities. While the last report of brokers' loans made by Federal Reserve member banks in New York City showed a gain of $133,000,000 for the week, the loans made by both New York banks and the out-of-town banks declined. The loans made "for others" gained $194,000,000 and reached a new high record.

Billion Dollars Contributed.

SINCE the first of the year, non-banking sources have contributed $1,206,000,000 of new money for stock market purposes, while the two classes of banks have curtailed their loans. In the same period the total loans gained $755,000,000.

The higher rediscount rate is not likely to cause any curtailment in the use of credit for stock market purposes. Quite the reverse is likely. Higher rates merely attract new funds to New York and Wall street can afford to pay the price so long as stocks maintain their recent state of activity. Cheap money would be the most effective influence to reduce brokers' loans.

Conditions in Pittsburgh.

SO FAR the change in the New York rediscount rate has had no appreciable effect on business here. Bankers do not expect any influence until the rate is changed in this district. In recent weeks there has been an increased desire on th part of people carrying stocks to secure accommodations through local banks instead of through the New York call money market.

So far as industrial activity is concerned, business here is far above normal for this season of the year. More than half of the third quarter is passed and it is now practically certain that the volume for the three-month period will be close to that of the second quarter and far above that of a year ago.

The retail stores report that their sales have been good for this season of the year. Early in 1929 Pittsburgh's stores were not entirely satisfied with their volume, but the district now stands high among the parts of the country in which conditions are good.

PACIFIC GAS HOLDERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—The prevalence of investment trust and holding company buying of Pacific Gas and Electric issues has, for the first six months of this year, failed to alter perceptibly the distribution of either the preferred or common stocks. Figures on the exact holdings of investment trusts are not available to date since a number of the accounts that are known to be trust holdings are still carried in brokers' names.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company was a pioneer in the idea of customer ownership of its securities and has from time to time endeavored to increase the number of small stockholders, as of June 30, this position was not altered, as the following data reveals. Holders of from one to five shares amounted to 10.5 per cent of the total, as compared to 8.8 per cent on December 31, 1928. The larger stockholders' groups showed fraction declines ranging from 1 per cent to ½ per cent with the exception of the "over 1,000-share class," which remained constant at 1.1 per cent of total stockholders. However, a gain in gross number of shareholders is made in every classification since, with the increase in capitalization, the number of holders has increased from 49,068 December 31, 1928, to 55,749 as of June 30, 1929.

Oklahoma Gas Corp. Net for Half Higher

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation, a subsidiary of American Natural Gas Corporation, reports that gross earnings for six months ended June 30, 1929, amounted to $6,714,289, as compared with $6,161,465 for the first half of 1928. After operating expenses, maintenance and taxes, net operating income totaled $3,378,560, as against $2,927,866.

For the 12 months ended June 30, 1929, gross earnings were $10,649,539, as compared with $10,096,715 for the year ended December 31, 1928. After operating expenses, maintenance and taxes, net operating income amounted to $4,454,772, as against $4,004,069 for the calendar year 1928.

Glidden Company Earns $2.79 Share

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Glidden Company's July net profit was $200,188, after charges, depreciation and taxes, against $155,186 in 1928. Nine months' net, $2,090,775, against $1,356,309 in 1928. This is equal, after preferred dividends, to $2.79 a share on 600,000 common shares, against $2.47 a share on 400,000 common shares in the 1928 period.

CLAUDE NEON CHANGE

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Claude Neon Electrical Products, Inc., of Arizona, and various enterprises owned by the company, formally changed its name to Claude Neon Electrical Products Corporation, Ltd., of Delaware, stockholders of old company having deposited more than 50 per cent of common and preferred stocks in exchange for securities of new company.

Request has been made by directors of the Delaware corporation that persons holding stock in the old company present same to the Los Angeles Investment Trust Company and stock in the new company will be issued immediately. The preferred stock of the new company will be convertible at the rate of two shares of preferred for one of common at option of holder until January 1, 1930.

Stock of the new company has been substituted in exchange for that of Arizona company for trading on Los Angeles Curb Exchange. Listing involves 185,000 shares of no par common out of an authorized issue of 500,000 and 60,000 shares of $20 par preferred stock out of an authorized issue of 75,000 shares.

California Standard To Expand Facilities

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—Standard Oil Company of California is considering important expansion of its cracking facilities, both at El Segundo refineray and Richmond refinery in the event that the Kettleman Hills shut-in agreement goes through, as now appears probable.

It is reported in the oil industry that Standard Oil of California is prepared to invest up to $10,000,000 in this development, dividing the investment equally between the two plants.

Export Lines Get Ship Board Loan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—A loan of $6,900,000 to the American Export lines for construction of four combination passenger and cargo vessels for the North Atlantic to Mediterranean and Black Sea trade was approved today by the Shipping Board.

New York Banks Raise Loan Rate

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—A number of banks recently have been marking up the rate charged customers on collateral loans to 6½ per cent from 6 per cent. This movement has come about since the Federal Reserve Bank raised the rediscount rate to 6 per cent.

STEEL MARKET PROSPERITY TO LAST

Yardstick by Which Trade Is Measured Indicates General Improvement

By B. E. V. LUTY

Rates of operation in various steel consuming industries are so well defined that a close approximation of the course of steel during the remainder of the year can be ventured with no little hope of its being proved correct provided no radical change occurs in general trade. For a long time past the principal chance of such a change has lain in the stock market, and of late that chance is regarded as being reduced by the increasing selectivity shown in the boosting of stock prices.

TYPICAL CONSUMPTION

Month by month this year automobile production has fluctuated according to the seasonal average shown in the last five years with a fidelity that is truly astonishing, and this makes promise that there will be similar adherence in the next few months. In each month of the last six the structural fabricating shops have increased their order book, ensuring at least as heavy deliveries of steel to them in the next few months as in the last few months. The farm implement industry has gotten into full swing after a very mild mid-year lull, with prospects of continued activity. The pace of buying of oil country goods, relatively light for a long time past, is steady, with prospects merely of a seasonal decrease late in the year. There is a larger volume of natural gas line pipe business on books than formerly. Freight car shops will begin running out of orders within a couple of months, with no great prospect of full replenishment. Rail production is undergoing its regular seasonal decrease, somewhat later than usual.

The lines of steel consumption referred to involve not much less than half the total steel movement and may be regarded as quite typical of steel as a whole. From the available data, with assistance from information regarding current rates of mill operation, bookings, etc., the course of steel as a whole can be predicted with some hope of success.

PRODUCTION LULL SLIGHT

The peak rate of steel production was reached in May, one to two months later than ever before. There was no lull such as could be called a summer lull. From the peak rate to date there is a decrease of between 5 and 10 per cent in the rate of steel ingot production. A further slight decrease is to be expected for next month. October may possibly show a bulge, simply because very frequently it has done so, the balance of probability being that it will show a further decrease. Decreases in November and December are in accordance with the consumption data available and would moreover be quite in accordance with seasonal precedents. Reducing these ideas to actual figures for the sake of clarity rather than in hope of making a fully successful guess, there seems to be quite a chance that the December rate of steel production will be 15 to 20 per cent under the peak rate.

Regularly December has been a low month, followed by increases in the early months of the new year. The year's ingot production should then be in the neighborhood of 56,000,000 to 57,000,000 tons or between 10 and 15 per cent gain over last year, which was record high by 7 per cent, passing 1928 by that amount, 1927 having been a slightly off year. Production to August 1 showed an 18 per cent lead over last year, but that percentage lead could not be expected to continue from present conditions, while there is the important point that last year the late months had heavier production that was in normal relation to the earlier months.

RECORD AUTO OUTPUT

Total production of automobiles and trucks, United States and Canada, in July is officially reported at 517,792, making a seven-month total of 3,929,545. A computation based on monthly production in the last five years shows an average of 62.92 per cent of the year's production falling in the first seven months, with certain percentages for each individual month. Allocating the seven-month total to individual months in accordance with this five-year experience gives monthly totals which vary scarcely at all from the monthly production actually reported. February was 4 per cent low, while other months varied no more than 2 per cent.

April was 2 per cent high and July 2 per cent low. As usual, April was the high month, and the April to July decrease was 22 per cent, while the five-year average shows 19 per cent decrease. Apparently it was a case of production suddenly jumping at the beginning of the year and then following normal seasonal swing. Accordingly one may venture to make a computation for the year, based on continued fidelity to seasonal precedent. This would make a year's total of 6,250,000, against 4,601,141 last year, or 36 per cent increase. As there was a total increase of only 10 per cent in five years, from 1923 to 1928, it appears that this style of so many people buying a new car is going to end some time, and if the style wanes soon the year's production will be under the 6,250,000 now indicated.

ACTIVITY INDICATED

In each of the six months, February to July inclusive, the structural fabricating shops booked more tonnage than they shipped, the excess in the six months being 15.6 per cent. July bookings were the largest on record, barring only March of this year and August of last year. Heavier steel shipments to the shops are therefore indicated.

Rail production has dropped below a 75 per cent rate, and a further decrease is certain for next month. Later there will be some new orders for early rolling.

The recent lull in new buying, occurring at this time in the year, is not at all significant, the rate of consumption being by far the better index. There are still some old engagements to be filled, and the vacation season has quite an influence upon buying. By the same token, of course, heavier buying next month would not presage heavier shipments. Finished steel prices are steady al along the line, following recent slight declines in wire products and black and galvanized sheets.

Reduce Number Of Impaired Engines

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Class 1 railroads of this country on August 1 had 7,681 locomotives in need of repair or 13.4 per cent of the number on line, according to the American Railway Association.

This was a reduction of 544 compared with the number in need of repair on July 15.

Locomotives in need of classified repairs on August 1 totaled 4,205 or 7.3 per cent, a reduction of 221 compared with July 15, while 3,476 or 6.1 per cent were in need of running repairs.

Class 1 railroads on August 1 had 5,306 serviceable locomotives in storage compared with 5,414 on July 15.

American Woolen Outlook Gloomy

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—In the six months' statement of the American Woolen Company there is no evidence of an approaching end of the paralyzing five-year depression in the woolen and worsted industry. Current good openings reflect a slightly better demand than a year ago. Business on staple goods of late weeks has been improving.

Fundamentally, the industry is confronted with a vast overcapacity and a dwindling market. American Woolen is in a sound financial position, with current assets June 30 of $69,406,106, against current liabilities of $8,398,608, or a ratio of better than eight to one. Company has brought its inventory down close to $40,000,000 from $54,000,000 at the end of 1925.

WINDOW GLASS TRADE

The week, according to the American Window Glass Review, witnessed a continued steady improvement in the window glass situation and prospects now seem more favorable for at least a normal fall demand for this commodity. Not only are inquiries being received in considerably larger volume, but actual business at hand is reported on the increase.

Several factors have combined to bring about this strengthened position of the market. Not the least of these is the evident desire of a number of jobbers to replenish their depleted warehouse stocks before the heavy consumer demand for fall building sets in. While the hand-to-mouth buying of the summer months is still much in evidence, the increase in quantity orders placed the last 10 days shows some anticipation of future needs on the part of distributors generally.

Operations at window glass factories are still at the year's low level. Several leading units are again getting into production, however, with every indication that output the coming year will show an appreciable gain over the total for either this month or last. A most successful start is reported at the American Window Glass Company's factory in Belle Vernon, Pa. The coming week this company will also resume operations on the No. 3 cylinder machine tank at the Jeannette plant, and plans soon to light fires at the new Fourcault installation at the Arnold, Pa., factory.

In the plate glass branch of the industry both production and distribution are being maintained at record seasonal levels. Production of polished plate glass in July, according to figures released this week by P. A. Hughes, secretary of the Plate Glass Manufacturers of America, totaled 13,057,098 square feet. This figure represents a pronounced gain over the July, 1928, output of 9,966,349 square feet. In June of this year 12,278,002 square feet were produced.

Endicott-Johnson Rubber Reclaiming

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Rubber reclaiming plant, operated by Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corporation for the last two years, is "making a very fair profit," says Edward Christfield, manager of the division. Capacity of plant is 22,000 pounds of finished rubber a day, all of which is used in Paracord plant.

MARKET BULLS AGAIN PUSH STOCKS UP

Shares Advance Briskly Despite Appearance of Week-End Profit-Taking

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Bullish operations were again pressed forward vigorously at the opening of today's stock market. A block of 12,000 shares of Republic Steel was taken at 120⅞, up 3⅜ points and a new high record.

Some profit-taking came into United States Steel, yesterday's bull favorite, the opening transaction taking place at a recession of ¾ of a point. American Can and General Electric each rose about 3 points, R. H. Macy 2¼ and Lackawanna, Southern Pacific and Western Union 1 to 1⅝ points.

Week-end profit-taking soon turned the market highly irregular, U. S. Steel slipping back 3 points, but the so-called independent steels were hurled sharply higher and powerful buying came into the communications and chemical shares.

There was practically nothing in the overnight news developments to affect the market, and what irregularity appeared was regarded as in the nature of corrective reactions, after yesterday's startling advances. The week-end business and trade reviews reported little change in the generally pleasing conditions. Yesterday's call loan rate of 7 per cent carried over the week-end.

American Telephone was rushed up 5½ points to 300, a new high, and International Telephone rose 6½ points to a new record at 145. Inland Steel rose 3½, Youngstown Sheet and Tube nearly 5 and Bethlehem 7½ points to record levels. Ingersoll Rand, Allied Chemical and U. S. Industrial Alcohol rose about 8 points each, the last named to a new peak.

Among issues selling up a point or two were American Smelting, Baltimore and Ohio, Johns Manville, Mack Truck, Standard Oil of California and Atlantic Refining.

Soft spots included Commercial Investment Trust, off 3 points; Allis Chalmers and Union Pacific, down about 2; National Biscuit, Southern California Edison and Hershey Chocolate off a point or more.

RADIO MERGER ANNOUNCED

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—A consolidation of several manufacturers of radio tubes into the National Union Radio Corporation was revealed with the filing of incorporation papers in Delaware. The company will have an authorized capitalization of 1,000,000 no par capital stock, of which 40,000 shares will be presently outstanding.

The manufacturers of Sonatron, Marathon, Televocal and Magnatron tubes will form the new corporation and, it is expected, other tube manufacturing companies will be added from time to time.

Joseph E. Davies, former head of the federal trade commission has been elected chairman of the board. Other directors include Paul M. Mazur and Sylvester W. Muldowny, of the banking firm of Lehman Brothers.

The Radio Corporation of America will acquire options on 50,000 shares of stock in the new company, which has received a loan of $2,000,000 from R. C. A. When R. C. A. takes up the 50,000 shares at $40 a share, the principal amount of the loan will be cancelled. The National Union Radio Company, it was announced, will operate under reciprocal licensing contracts with the Radio Corporation under which each organization is authorized to make tubes covered by the other's patents.

Plants of the companies forming the National Union Radio Corporation are located in Chicago and in Newark, Hoboken and Union City, N. J.

Foreign Trade Test To Credit Situation

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—In its monthly review the Union Trust Company of Cleveland states that the "real test of our credit situation may be expected to manifest itself, as time goes on, with respect to foreign exchange and foreign trade," and that "if high interest rates in this country continue to attract foreign capital here to such an extent that our foreign markets may be adversely affected, it is possible that a period of recession and readjustment might ensue."

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Baldwin to Boost Schedules.

With the largest volume of business on its books in three years, Baldwin Locomotive Works plans to increase operations to 40 per cent in September and with present bookings can maintain this rate into the new year. In July the company booked $5,000,000 of business, the best month since March, but business so far in August has been dull. However, there are a number of inquiries in the market.

Tobacco Exports Decline.

Exports of leaf tobacco from the United States during the first half of 1929 declined 7 per cent compared with the same period in 1928 and amounted to 233,000,000 pounds, according to a statement made public by the tobacco section of the Department of Commerce. This fact does not constitute a discouraging outlook, officials of the Commerce Department stated, since tobacco export trade of 1928 was much inflated, owing to abnormal conditions in China.

American Water Works Output.

American Water Works and Electric's July output of electricity totaled 157,901,254 kilowatt hours, a gain of 13 per cent over July, 1928. Seven months' output totaled 1,103,030,437 kilowatt hours, or 10 per cent greater than the output of 1,002,453,227 kilowatt hours for the same period in 1928.

Bryant & Chapman.

Stockholders of Bryant & Chapman Company, of Hartford, Conn., have approved the offer of the National Dairy Products Corporation, of 32,000 shares of its common stock for Bryant & Chapman stock. The basis of exchange is four shares of National Dairy for five of Bryant & Chapman. A cash dividend of $4.50 also was voted.

Construction Contracts Up.

Contracts let in heavy construction and engineering projects in the past week were substantially higher than in the corresponding week last year, due principally to a higher rate of activity in commercial and industrial building, Engineering News-Record reports.

Cement Prices Reduced.

Price of cement has been reduced 20 cents a barrel in New York to $2.23 per barrel and reduced 30 cents a barrel in parts of New Jersey by several of the leading companies.

LOCAL STOCKS MAKE NEW HIGHS

Blaw Knox and Arkansas Gas Hit New Peaks And Hold Leadership

The leaders in Friday's trading on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange again held the center of interest today. Blaw Knox, United Engineering and Arkansas Gas all opened at higher levels.

Blaw Knox surged up to a new high at 59½ on the opening transaction and was the most active issue during the first hour of trading. An exceptionally large volume of business together with the economies resulting from the recent consolidation with two other companies is placing Blaw Knox in an attractive position.

The strength in United Engineering, which has made steady upward progress during the week, has been attributed to its well filled order books and the possibility of a consolidation with another large organization in this district.

"Arkansas Gas hit a new high today," is being accepted as a matter of course in speaking of the local market. The stock again broke yesterday's record and the high rate of activity indicates that the interests behind the stock are by no means through with it.

The general list was strong, reflecting the tone of the markets in other cities.

N. J. STANDARD BIG LEADER IN OILS

Market Giving Recognition To Jersey's Equities And Earning Ability

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The past 10 days have seen some stock market recognition of the huge enterprise and enormous values represented by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Between August 10 and its high price a few days ago, allowing for being "ex" 50 cents a share in that period, Standard Oil of N. J.'s common stock market valuation increased by $417,740,000 in the move from 57 to 73⅝.

This appears an enormous price appreciation for one enterprise. But it should be remembered that Standard Oil of N. J., along with a half dozen or more of the major integrated oil units, has not participated in the higher valuations which the market has been placing on leading units of other industries.

OUTLOOK FOR OILS

Oil stocks, as a group, have been under the deterring influence of overproduction of crude petroleum. This developed a state of apathy among investment interests whose attention has been monopolized by stocks representing other groups of securities. Because the oil business is not sensationally profitable, however, does not mean that the big, well-managed units, with facilities which permit operating economies not available to all oil companies, are not in a position to improve their earnings. Nor does it mean that the securities of long-established properties with proven earning power and dividend records, such as Standard Oil of N. J., should not participate, at least to some extent, in the higher valuations which investment trusts, investors and others are placing on securities representing the equities in companies occupying like positions in other industries.

Junior stocks of leading public utility companies sell for 30 times their earnings; many industrials are quoted at or nearly as high a relative price level. Until its recent price advance, Standard Oil of N. J. was selling about 13 times its 1928 profits of $4.43 a share. This allowed nothing for probable increased profit in 1929 which might easily bring New Jersey's net to $6 a share.

RECORD ESTABLISHED

Further, Standard Oil of New Jersey is not only a long-established earner and dividend payer, but it is one of the largest corporate entities in the world.

In physical construction it is markedly similar to United States Steel Corporation. It has its own raw material, its own transportation in the form of the world's biggest pipeline operation and America's biggest ocean-going tonnage; it leads the world of oil in refining facilities as well as in marketing outlets for moving refined products to the consumer. Few American companies handle a business volume equaling its $1,300,000,000 gross, nor the volume of exports that New Jersey carries on in oil products. Like United States Steel, it is the biggest factor in its particular industry, but it does not control as large a percentage of the oil business as Steel does in its industry.

UNUSUAL CASH POSITION

New Jersey started 1929 with cash and marketable securities of $263,847,072, and the size of this treasury position was exceeded, among American corporations, only by Steel's treasury position of $353,000,000 cash items. New Jersey's cash items were $49,000,000 larger than those of General Motors and $85,000,000 greater than General Electric's cash position.

It is of further significance that New Jersey last year increased cash by $94,000,000 and investments in affiliated companies by $50,000,000; that this sum, $144,000,000, was within $3,000,000 of its combined reserves and surplus earnings last year. This indicates its ability to provide last year for necessary property expansion and to move products faster, resulting in all the year's surplus profits of $72,000,000 and a large part of reserves being retained in cash form.

ENORMOUS EQUITIES

A study of the New Jersey's annual report would not disclose the enormous equities represented by book figure of $1,572,267,610 assets. In many instances these are merely a fraction of the worth of assets they represent. This arises from the policy of carrying assets at cost. Physical properties go in on this basis and are constantly depreciated from reserves; holdings in affiliated properties (those not owned 100 per cent) stay at cost no matter how much more valuable they become.

As example: New Jersey owns 72 per cent of Humble Oil and about two-thirds of Imperial Oil, Ltd. These holdings, along with many other affiliated properties, are included in the total assets bulked at $1,572,267,000 end of 1928.

But the present stock market prices for Humble and Imperial places a combined value of $823,000,000 on New Jersey's holdings of those two companies.

Humble and Imperial are large properties. But they are far from representing more than 10 per cent, as their market value indicates, of New Jersey's total assets. The inescapable conclusion is that these and other holdings are carried by New Jersey at ridiculously low figures compared with present worth.

R. I. Carloadings Reported Higher

CHARLES L. BRADLEY

Mr. Bradley, chairman of the board, Erie Railroad, returning home from Europe, advises: "If fall business is favorable, I expect Erie Railroad's 1929 earnings to show considerable increase."

Campbell Says Wheat Will Reach $2

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Thomas D. Campbell, Montana wheat man and advisor of the Russian Department of Agriculture on large-scale farming, is very bullish on wheat. He is quoted as saying:

"The Federal Farm Board is doing the farmer the greatest injustice in history by not helping him to conserve his crop for the peak prices sure to prevail this fall.

"This is a drought year and wheat is the scarcest food commodity in the world today," he said. "If the small farmer who is dumping his crop as it is harvested could hold it or have it held for two months, he could realize at least 50 cents more on every bushel.

"The bullish tendency of the wheat market today is only an inkling of what conditions will be three months from now. May wheat will demand almost any price and I am certain December wheat will sell at $2 a bushel before Christmas."

Stock Exchange Topics

Floating Supply of High Grade Stocks Is Being Steadily Reduced.

THE floating supply of standard high-grade stocks in the market is believed in Wall street to have been substantially curtailed by investment trusts, insurance companies, holding companies and wealthy individuals who are understood to have taken out of the market millions of shares of these "quality" securities. This is assigned as one reason why any wave of concerted buying sends them to new high levels in a short time. Moreover, experienced operators in the market are believed to have taken their losses in lessr attractiv second and third grade issues that have followed the market leaders. All this tends to concentrate activity in a comparatively selective list of the best grade of shares.

Predictions which have been rather numerous in the New York financial district that the present comparative ease in call money rates probably will not continue much longer, are considerably tempered by the fact that corporations, investment companies and others than the banks supplied the money market with nearly $200,000,000 in the last week reported. It is felt that if the market can continue to tap such abundant credit sources, this may offset the normal tightening of call rates expected to result from expansion of money in circulation to meet increasing commercial needs in the fall. Large amounts of cash in the form of subscriptions to corporate and investment company shares are flowing into the treasuries of these organizations and, when not immediately required, are naturally put to work in the call money market.

THE advance of ½ of 1 per cent in the rate charged to customers on collateral loans, lifting it to 6½ per cent, is understood to be limited thus far to branches of New York banks located outside the financial district, while those downtown have not yet adopted that policy. Such loans cannot be rediscounted at the Reserve Bank, and with that rate at 6 per cent, the banks are by no means partial to such loans, usually making them to customers whom they cannot afford to refuse. The higher rediscount rates now gives the smaller banks an opportunity to ask a rate which they consider justified from this class of loans.

Effect of the accumulation which has been in progress in the leading oils is now being felt in these stocks. Transactions in the Standard Oils have been unusually heavy at advancing prices. This purchasing is not accidental, but is loked upon as quite significant as reflecting confidence of oil authorities in the future of the industry. Up to a day or two ago, there was little public following in the oils, because so many commission houses were advising against a long position until the outlook is clearer. The heavy trading at higher levels, however, has been attracting outside buying, which has added to the upturns in the leading issues.

PRESENT indications are that earnings of several of the country's leading carriers will run as high as $25 a share this year. Students of the rails now believe that Norfolk and Western will be up near the top. They point out that it will only be necessary for the company to do as well in the last half of this year as it did in the same period of 1928 to accomplish the result. An increase in dividend rate is hinted.

International Telephone and Telegraph extended its gains 6 or 7 points, making a total advance of about 25 points for the week. The 4½ per cent convertible bonds advanced more than 10 points. The street is inclined to attribute the strength to investment trust buying, which has become a standard explanation recently, as indication of the substantial improvement in the company's position, it became known today that more than $16,500,000 of the convertible bonds had been exchanged for stock, reducing the total funded debt of International and its associated companies to around $140,000,000.

American Sugar to Add Amalgamated

DENVER, Aug. 24.—American Beet Sugar Company will absorb the Amalgamated Sugar Beet Company it was learned here. It is understood that American Beet is negotiating for 73 per cent of Amalgamated stock. Latter company's common shares are held in voting trust which expires in 1931. Option on this stock is expected to be secured next week.

Combined facilities of amalgamation will have a grinding capacity of 2,500,000 pounds sugar daily during the season.

Business Failures Increase in Week

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Business failures in the United States increased last week to 399 from previous week's figures of 368, and were 22 more than the 377 insolvencies of the corresponding week last year, R. G. Dun & Co. reports.

YALE & TOWNE MAKES GOOD RECOVERY

Net Income for First Half Increased 44 Per Ct.; New Subsidiary Is Profitable

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Net in come of Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company for the first six months showed considerable improvement over the corresponding 1928 period.

For the last two years competition has been rather keen in the industry, and Yale & Towne has reported slightly lower than average earnings.

In the first half year the company earned $2.71 a share on 440,000 shares of capital stock, compared with $1.88 a share on 438,115 capital shares. This represent 1 an increase of more than 44 per cent in net income over 1928 and is about equal to income reported in 1926. The outlook for the current year is promising.

Stockholders of Yale & Towne recently approved issuance of 27,258 additional shares of capital stock to be exchanged for total assets of Steubing Cowan Company, manufacturers of hand trucks and skids. The product of this company is a new departure in the material-handling field, and many of its novel features have been patented.

Material to be moved by this method is placed on a platform or skid raised about three inches from the floor, and the lift truck run beneath it and raised. Trucks and skids of this type were introduced about three years ago, and conspicuous progress has been noted, especially over the last two years.

Acquisition of the Steubing Cowan Company will aid in rounding out Yale & Towne's material-handling line, which has become an important part of its business. Previous to this acquisition, Yale & Towne manufactured only electrically-driven trucks, hand and electrically-operated hoisting machinery and overhead trackage systems. The new line of hand trucks supplements the electrically-driven trucks. It is expected that the combination, in addition to reducing the cost of production of both companies, should materially extend this branch of the business.

Iron Ore Shipments On Lakes Increase

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Lake Erie docks sent 3,440,400 tons of iron ore to interior furnaces in the first 21 days of August, against 2,842,96[illegible] tons in the 1928 period.

STEEL SECTION OF MARKET STRONG

Study of Dividend-Paying Steel Stocks Indicates Good Yield On Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Comparison of the 17 dividend paying steel issues on the New York Stock Exchange brings to light the fact that while the steel shares have been advancing on excellent earnings reports for the first six months of this year, the upturn has been comparatively moderate, leaving the majority of these issues in a sound market position.

The following comparisons are made on the basis of probable earnings for 1929 obtained by doubling net per share available for common stock for the first half. While, of course, this will not prove accurate in all cases, it is the fairest general forecast possible, as the second half of 1929 is expected generally to show nearly as good returns as the first half for the steel companies.

On June 30, last, before publication of any earnings reports, the 17 steel issues were selling at an average of 9.62 times earnings, with an income yield averaging 4.32 per cent. On August 20, after all earnings reports were out, times earnings selling price had risen only 0.7 points, while yield had declined only .34 per cent. Thus, the dividend paying steel issues were selling at only 10.32 times earnings, on August 20, on an average, with a yield of 3.98 per cent.

DIVIDEND NEEDS EXCEEDED

This is the more remarkable when it is realized that the average annual earnings per share in excess of a full year's dividend requirements were $6.57. In other words, the average steel company will have over $6.50 per share additional to distribute to common shareholders as it sees fit.

Although this large balance was contributed to largely by United States Steel and Youngstown Sheet and Tube, which had $13.76 and $15.24 indicated above dividend requirements respectively, few concerns had less than $3 indicated, and the lowest was Central Alloy Steel, with $2.58.

On a times earnings basis, American Rolling Mill and Ludlum were the only two companies to be marketdly out of line on the up side. Most conspicuous on the under side of the average are Follansbee Brothers and Youngstown Sheet and Tube. American Rolling Mill is selling higher relatively than the average on prospects of increased income from its continuous sheet process, which is being adopted on a royalty basis by a number of large concerns. Ludlum's outlook is improved by developments in the alloy steel field.

U. S. STEEL LEADER

Since the end of the first half year, United States Steel has shown the greatest appreciation in market price, with Bethlehem, Follansbee and Crucible also showing fair gains. Only three issues, Newton Steel, Ludlum and Sharon Steel Hoop sold lower August 20 than June 30.

The conclusion must be drawn that the investing public either has not realized fully the sound position of the steel issues from a market point of view or else regards the large current earnings as merely temporary and likely to decline as steel activity eases off in the future. Even so, the large balances on the average steel shares from which directors could make extra disbursements or increase annual dividend rates make it appear that the steel issues are still low priced as a rule, taking industrial, railroad and public utility issues in comparison.

PIG IRON SALES LARGER

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Further tonnages of pig iron in addition to the 4,000 tons closed in the New York territory early in the week have been sold, and the outlook is for a good total volume of sales, probably running between 12,000 and 15,000 tons. There is also activity in the Philadelphia district, one Eastern Pennsylvania user being reported to have closed for 15,000 tons from Eastern Pennsylvania makers. Altogether some 20,000 tons of business has been done there this week.

The Southern iron situation seems a little better, with several furnaces blown out and production curtailed to some extent. Southern dealers have worked off some of their surplus iron, shipping it to a number of other districts, and the price situation is just a shade firmer, though concession to low figures are reported in some cases. Sales for delivery in the New York district have been mainly in small lots.

Inquiry round New York now consists mainly of small tonnages, as the large business has been largely cleared up. The price situation is about the same, with the general tone of the market good.

PREDICT HIGHER KENNECOTT INCOME

Big Copper Producer Reaps Profits from Holdings In Utah Copper Company

BOSTON, Aug. 24.—Some indication of what Kenunecott Copper Corporation is likely to earn this year is obtainable from the quarterly reports of the 98 per cent-owned Utah Copper Company. In 1928 Utah Copper Company earned $24,876,246 and the parent Kennecott showed total earnings of $45,651,533, in both cases after all taxes and depreciation. These Utah earnings represented 55 per cent of total Kennecott earnings.

In the first half of this year, Utah reported net income after depreciation but before Federal taxes of $19,023,371. However, sales of copper in the second quarter were generally below production and it seems only reasonable to conclude that the same condition existed with respect to Utah. Utah's output of copper in the first six months totaled 165,619,692 pounds. First quarter production of 80,999,345 pounds was made at a cost of 6.3 cents a pound and second quarter production of 84,620,347 pounds at a cost of 6.4 cents a pound.

UTAH PRODUCTION

Assuming Utah produces 325,000,000 pounds of copper this year at an average cost of 6.4 cents a pound, its net profit after depreciation and taxes on an 18-cent metal market would be above $38,000,000. Assuming again that the Utah earnings will bear the same relation to total Kennecott earnings as in 1928, and exclusive of the recently acquired Chase Copper Company earnings, there are in prospect for the parent company total net earnings of better than $70,000,000. With Chase reporting net after depreciation, interest and taxes of $982,351 in the first four months of this year, there is also the prospect of additional earnings of between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 from this source. Such total earnings would be equivalent to close to $8 a share on the 9,357,152 shares of Kennecott outstanding following the acquisition of Chase. In 1928 Chase reported earnings of $1,584,357.

NEVADA EARNINGS

Another phase of Kennecott's earning power which does not show up fully is the equity in undistributed earnings of the 43 per cent-owned Nevada. Last year Nevada earned $15,201,104 and paid out in dividends $7,892,684. Kennecott received about $3,400,000 in dividends and had better than $3,000,000 additional equity in undistributed earnings of Nevada. Should Nevada produce 300,000,000 pounds of copper this year at a cost of 9 cents a pound it should earn approximately $14,500,000 on the basis of the prevailing $2 annual dividend rate. Consequently Kennecott would have an equity in undistributed earnings amounting to approximately $5,400,000.

These indicated earnings for both Kennecott and Nevada are based on a revival of copper buying that will result in the sale of close to the year's output. Because of the small buying of copper in the June quarter, earnings for that period were small for most companies, as witness the following on Nevada: With production of 72,616,900 pounds of copper at a cost of roughly 9 cents a pound, net earnings would have been approximately $6,500,000 if total production had been sold at 18 cents a pound, whereas actual reported earnings for the quarter were only $3,786,254.

GRAIN STORAGE PROBLEM

ST. PAUL, Aug. 24.—An acute shortage of grain storage facilities is a great menace to the American farmer and immediate correction of this situation is an important problem confronting the Federal Farm Board, according to Alexander Legge, board chairman.

"Right now," he said, "the most important angle to this farm relief proposition is the finding of a place of storage for crops.

"Modern methods have supplied means for the farmer to ship his grain almost immediately after it is threshed. All the grain cannot be shipped at the same time, hence the necessity for storage facilities."

The storage situation in the Northwest is serious, with a large amount of available space filled with holdover grain and some sent here from the Southwest. However, grain men say they expect no trouble if farmers do not try to rush all their crop to market immediately.

FOREST LOVE

IN the darkest corner of the hospital waiting room Nancy sat with her hands clasped limply on her knees.

She waited patiently, her eyes staring straight before her, with the peculiar unseeing look of the blind. She had waited so long that she had lost all sense of time.

First there had been the station waiting room in Oakland, and then the chair car on the train, and then the station waiting room at Merced. For the night operator at the hospital had said that Roger was sleeping and no one could see him until morning.

He was still sleeping. Perhaps they would let her go to him when he awoke. She hardly counted on it. Now that she was here, she could not plan. She couldn't even see him, as she used to, back of her eyes . . . she wondered if she would know him . . . if he would know her . . . It had been so long.

"Poor girl, she looks ready to keel over," the man said sympathetically. "Maybe if you'd say something to her, honey—"

But the girl drew back shyly . . . "Oh, no . . . I'd hate to . . . Jack. I've seen her somewhere! Haven't you?"

A nurse stood in the doorway. "You may come now, Miss Hollenbeck." Nancy stood up, deadly pale.

Then turning to the couple on the davenport, "I'm afraid you'll have to wait a little longer. This young lady was first. What did you say the name was?"

They looked at Nancy with the veiled animosity one always shows towards the one who is first. "MacKimmons," the man said curtly. "Tell him 'Mac'—he'll know."

"MacKimmons," the nurse echoed. She beckoned Nancy, who followed, quietly, her great, tragic eyes fixed straight ahead.

There was a stairway and two long corridors. Plenty of time to think . . . to plan . . . what to say . . . Instead, she found herself counting the squares of the black and white linoleum floor.

The nurse stopped at a door marked "Dr. Cronwall." She held it open for Nancy. "Just a few moments," she said pleasantly.

"I'll remember," Nancy promised. The door swung behind her. She was in Roger's room. That was he, the big man with his head swathed in bandages, lying on the high, white hospital bed. She was here with Roger at last . . . Her knees began to tremble, she thought of doubling back to the door before he saw her. All her energies had been bent on getting here . . . she had not thought further than that. And now she was here, and the uselessness of it all came over her with sudden, terrible clarity. It was as if she had walked blindly into the sea and been suddenly bruised and battered by a great incoming wave that drenched and choked and chilled her, and cast her, cold and gasping, back on the sand.

Roger was holding out his hand. He was smiling with his lips. "It was good of you to come, Nancy. I . . . was surprised when they told me. It wasn't necessary, you know. I'm not badly hurt."

"It was nothing," she murmured politely. "I'm glad you're not very ill." Her tongue cleaved to the roof of her mouth.

"Won't you sit down?"

"Thank you, Roger."

She took the chair by the bedside, and there was nothing left to say. Roger had closed his eyes. He lay motionless, a long, spare figure under the fresh white dimity coverlet.

A window curtain rattled faintly in the breeze from the open window. A bee buzzed on the other side of the screen. Outside someone was sprinkling a flower bed. You could hear the spatter of the water on the leaves, smell the warm dust, and the fresh woody smell of wet shrubs.

The smell of the soil in summer. . .of growing things . . .It brought back the day she let the stage go off without her while she lay in the grass, lost in Roger's arms . . .The funny little garden back of the cabin. . .The string beans he had planted, that she had never waited to see. . .

Tears welled slowly, dripped miserably down her cheeks. She brushed them away with the back of her hand, but they kept on coming. Tears of bereavement and defeat.

"Why, Nancy . . .you're crying!"

She nodded hopelessly. "I know. I can't help it. I'll go. It. . .it was useless. . . I shouldn't have come."

His heart began to hammer. There was a roaring in his ears. She. . .she must care. . .to have come . . . like that. . .That old black cloak, no hat. . .fastidious Nancy, so disheveled, so broken. He opened his mouth to speak. . ."Nancy. . .my dear. . ." And then he remembered.

It wasn't for him. It was for her lover, the fellow who rode his horse over the cliff.

When he could trust his voice he said, "Don't take it too hard, youngster. We've all got to die some time. Maybe it's better. . .he'd have been pretty bad off. . . had he lived."

And he thought, "That isn't the half of it. . .Nobody but me, and his wife, will ever know just how bad off he'd have been. . ."

She saw the bitter, twisting smile come around the corners of his mouth, and something else, something fleeting and tortured, and she knew as surely as if he had told her that he knew about Jack Beamer, that he still loved her, and that he would never, never take her back.

She got up unsteadily. There was no use in staying. Talk would only make it harder.

"Good-by, Roger . . . I'm glad you're . . . all right." She held out her hand, but he did not see it, he had turned his face to the wall.

"Good-by, Nancy. Thanks for coming."

She turned and stumbled toward the door. And suddenly she changed her mind. She had come to tell him something, and she hadn't told him. Never mind if it was useless . . . get it out . . . have it over with, once and forever . . .

"Roger."

"Yes, Nancy."

"Roger, I know what you think of me. And you're right. But I'd just like you to know that I never really loved anybody but you, that I even forgot poor Jack was dead after I read about you . . . being hurt, and I never thought of him again until you spoke . . . now . . . And I know you wouldn't have me, and it doesn't matter anyway, but I'd have come back to you . . . I wanted to come back—"

Her voice broke. With a little gulp, half sob, half cry, she groped for the door and plunged through it into the hall.

When Roger opened his eyes the nurse was standing there, where she had stood.

"Mr. and Mrs. MacKimmons are here. If you're not too tired," she said.

Thousands who long for the empty spaces of the air, in contrast to crowded automobile roads, ask, "how long before flying will be possible for everyone?" There are still many mechanical problems to be met, however, before flying can become as common as automobile riding. The Great Radio Romance

Now you can hear Vitaphone at its best! On the third anniversary of the birth of this new amusement miracle, Al Jolson, pioneer Vitaphone star, returns to demonstrate the surprising strides this marvel of the movies has made in the intervening years.

In "Say It With Songs," Warner Bros. present the final fruit of three years of sensational development. The day of experiment is over. Full accomplishment is here in this great epic of emotion.

Only Vitaphone could have given you the true Al Jolson, the Jolson who took the world by storm in "The Jazz Singer" and "The Singing Fool"—for this amazingly magnetic star had to be heard to be appreciated.

And only Vitaphone could tell a story such as "Say It With Songs"—a story of searing heartache eased by a moving melody—the story of a high romance that is first shattered and then remolded by—a song!

If you thought, as most everybody did, that "The Singing Fool" was the most gripping entertainment even Vitaphone could produce, see "Say It With Songs" and admit you were wrong.

SPORT COMMENT

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor

Contribs' Day.
They Write Letters.
And Pithy Ones.

'Vandalism' Decried.
New Diamond Asked.
For Knoxville Teams.

NO ROOF FOR MEYERS BOWL

TODAY is Contributors' Day in this column. In other words, more or less of a holiday for the pilot thereof. It's always easy to fill up a column that way and knock off work, especially when the contribs have something of interest to say and know how to say it.

The first letter comes from Eugene A. Holland, treasurer and purchasing agent of the American Tile and Manufacturing Company, and a resident of Knoxville. He protests the cutting up of the baseball diamond at McKinley Park, Knoxville, the cradle of so many big league stars and prominent minor league players, as detailed in this department a few days ago. Hearken to his plea:

I'LL SAY !
NOW—DO YOU THINK WE NEED PLAYGROUNDS ?

"Dear Sir: The writer is generally in accord with statements on sports embodied in your column, but he bitterly protests an expression used by you and repeated under the picture showing the destruction of the McKinley Park ball grounds. You allude to this legalized vandalism as 'the march of progress.'

"If this is the way progress advances around Pittsburgh, then God help the next generation. I use the words 'around Pittsburgh' advisedly, for you no doubt are aware what other cities are doing in the way of playgrounds and baseball diamonds for their boys and young men. Visit Cleveland on a Sunday afternoon and see as many as a dozen ball games going on simultaneously in a single park.

"But here in Pittsburgh the tendency always has been to curtail playgrounds. In fact, some fair-sized grounds have been cut down so continuously that all that remains is just enough room for mushball, that poor substitute for the 'grand old ball game.' Other grounds, as in the case of McKinley Park, have been utterly destroyed, without any effort being made to replace same.

"YOU, as sports editor of a powerful newspaper, can do a great service for the present young generation of ball players and at the same time endear yourself to the people of the South Hills who live in the vicinity of McKinley Park if you will start some kind of a drive to have this ball park replaced by another that easily can be laid out in the hollow about 300 yards away from the present location.

"This hollow was pretty well filled up during the time the Liberty Tubes were being excavated, as it was used as a dumping ground for the dirt and rocks taken from the tunnels. (In fact, the ball ground was put out of commission for a year or so at that period, but we are not discussing that depressing episode now.)

"Why cannot the city make an effort to replace, in another location, what it has so cheerfully destroyed? I am sure it would not require a tremendous outlay of cash to make this proposed new ball grounds a fact, for at the spot that I allude to the valley (or hollow) widens out quite considerably and very little of the surrounding hill would have to be removed.

SMACK !
BUH !
GRIMES

"Please start some agitation in this direction and keep our boys of the South Hills from developing into something other than 'sidewalk sheiks,' and bear in mind that you will receive the honest and enthusiastic support of many, many citizens."

THERE'S a letter with a constructive thought and one which we heartily endorse. We would suggest that Mr. Holland and other friends of sandlot baseball in Knoxville, which is a part of the city, get in touch with James F. Malone, who is running for the office of mayor of Pittsburgh, and present their problem to him. One of Malone's pet hobbies as a member of City Council has been to wage a never-ending fight for more and better playgrounds, embodying baseball fields, tennis courts and swimming pools. He has done wonders in that direction and we feel sure he gladly will take up this fight, especially with a site available for a new field for the Knoxvillians and Beltzhooverites. As for our reference to the "march of progress," what we wrote was the "stern march of progress," and there was a touch of cynicism in that line, and accompanying it were words of regret over the passing of the famous tradition-laden diamond to make room for the finish of Saw Mill Run road.

FROM W. B. J., of Greensburg, comes the following comment on the Pirates' sliding situation:

"Dear Sir: In the bitter wailing language of one in the distant past, 'The thing I feared has come upon me.' I heard one of the greatest preachers in America, more than 25 years ago, define superstition as 'the ignorant sister of faith.' If this is true, superstition is not entirely reprehensible.

"But, whether it is or isn't, as a lover of the Pirates, I was frightened weak when I read about the boastful boosters' breakfast, in defiance of the injunction, 'Let not him that girdeth on his armor boast himself as he that putteth it off,' and without any regard for the old logician who prayed, 'Lord, if you will help me to handle my friends, I'll agree to take care of my enemies.'

"One would be likely to call down on his head as an epithet the name of that talkative animal upon which Balaam was wont to ride if he should assume to make any suggestions to a management that knows much more than any of us, yet here goes:

"Especially in times of disaster such as have been following our favorites, is there no certain strong-voiced person on the team whose duty it is to prevent such collisions as occurred between Grantham and Paul Waner? The ball fell safe as it was. It had better fallen safe 20 times than result as it did. Our lion-hearted friend, Grimes, had a thousand times better let that cursed 'rabbit' ball, coming at him at very short range as if fired out of a cannon, go by than stop it with his bare pitching hand—than which there is no better in the country. If this should be repeated it is to be feared that we probably will be saying out of very sad hearts,

" 'Old Grimes is dead, that dear old soul,
" 'We ne'er shall see him more'——
"Which God forbid for a long time to come."

INDICATIONS are that the Meyers Bowl, in North Braddock, will not be roofed over for the winter, as had been planned, but will lie idle during the cold months, to be reopened in the spring. The three Meyers brothers have not yet arrived at a final decision on the matter, but are known to be doing some deep cogitating. The fact that they will have to compete with Motor Square Garden, the Moose Temple and the McKeesport arena, all well established and with their regular nights assured, Monday, Friday and Thursday, respectively, and the huge cost of roofing over the bowl, have placed the management at what is generally known as an impasse, or a great mental hazard, if you are a golfer.

The Meyers brothers, by the way, had an idea that they'd like to take over the promotion of fights at Motor Square Garden this

ENGLISH STAR MEETS HELEN IN FINAL

The champion's hard-hitting and perfect aim made her match almost entirely devoid of thrills, but plenty of tennis drama was paced into the other semi-final in which the tall, slim, black-haired English woman overcame Helen Jacobs by scores of 6-1, 3-6, 614. America's second ranking feminine player fought gallantly against elimination, but the unerring marksmanship of Mrs. Watson from the base line finally brought about her downfall.

The last remaining hope of an American victory in the doubles phase of the championship vanished when the all-San Francisco team of Mrs. Anna Harper and Edith Cross was eliminated at the hands of England's second best aggregation consisting of Mrs. Phyllis Covell and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd-Barron by scores of 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

In addition to finals in singles and doubles today, a mixed doubles exhibition will be played featuring the Davis Cup doubles stars, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, as partners of Betty Nuthall and Helen Wills.

WESTERN OPEN PACE SET BY ARMOUR

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The 72-hole scramble for the Western open golf championship has settled into a dog fight with Tommy Armour, master iron wielder from Orchard Lake, Mich., leading the pack with 136 strokes at the half way barrier. Trailing him by two strokes, this morning, was Gene Sarazen, the pudgy Italian shotmaker from Flushing, L. I., while Horton Smith, 21-year-old Joplin, Mo., sensation, threatened with a par breaking 139 total. Ten others had a bright chance, too, as they required only 142 shots for the 36-hole grind.

Only three were able to better par figures yesterday and they needed low scores to keep within a reasonable proximity of the leaders. They were Abe Espinosa, of Chicago, the defending titleholder, who got a bad 75 on his first round and came back with a 67, three under par, for a 142 total; Joe Kirkwood, the itinerant trick shot artist, who added a 69 to his 71 for a 141 and Orville Schell, a youngster from Chicago, who matched Espinosa for a similar 36-hole total.

Armour, who won the medal with a sizzling 65, was forced to take a 71 yesterday because of bad breaks and poor putting; Sarazen bagged a par 70 only by a great homeward bound spurt; while Smith slumped badly to take a 73 just when he had a golden opportunity to overtake the flying Scot.

Some of the best golfers of the nation remained within reasonable striking distance of Armour at the halfway mark, only a few of them being long shots.

MONDAY—THE 110-POUND BABY.

POLICE FIELD MEET ON TODAY

A big, varied and attractive program of sports events served as a magnet to draw hundreds of Western Pennsylvania lovers of athletics to the Stadium this afternoon for the eleventh annual Pittsburgh police meet.

Thirty track and field events, a modified marathon run, a tug of war, boxing and wrestling bouts, stunts by a fleet of airplanes, a band concert and a parade of athletes and officials made the elaborate card one of the most attractive ever offered at a sports carnival here, and an invasion by Detroit policemen gave the affair an inter-city flavor.

MARATHON RUN

The entrants in the modified marathon run started from Lake Elizabeth, North Side, at noon, and their arrival at the Stadium was the signal for the starting of the parade and the big track and field program. Representatives of the P. A. A., Twenty-seventh Ward Club, Pennsylvania Railroad A. A., Union A. C., Middle Division A. A., East Liberty Y. M. C. A., Emmett A. C., Hamilton School, Pittsburgh Railways, W. E. & M. Company and other organizations competed for the prizes.

Three relay events attracted a big entry list. The Detroiters competed with seven local teams in the 440-yard relay for police teams only, and 12 teams, including quartets from Harrisburg, Erie and Altoona were entered in the open mile relay. A special feature was a 440-yard relay for girls' teams, in which Middle Division A. A., W. E. & M. Company, Pittsburgh Railways, Pennsylvania R. R., McKees Rocks and Hamilton School were represented.

BOXING ON CARD

In one of the police bouts, Hughey Haggerty, of No. 6 station, will meet George H. Puff, of No. 3 station, and in the other Louis Cardell, of No. 8 station, will oppose Roy C. Brandt, of No. 14 station.

INJURED STAR, KREMER SET FOR GIANTS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—The Pirates and Giants may not have a definite idea of what they are fighting for, but the two ancient rivals will clash in a double-header at the Polo Grounds this afternoon.

The big day has quite a significance for the Freebooters in that Burleigh Grimes will return to the same slab whereon he was maimed in a double-header just five weeks to the day. On that hot July afternoon Burleigh was pitching in his best stride as he was struck down by a drive from Bill Terry's bat late in the game. Steve Swetonic went in and held the Giants in check for the remainder of the contest, but from that time, the pitching staff sagged in an astonishing manner.

REMY STARTS FIRST

Remy Kremer is likely to be on the slab in the first game of the twin bill, with Grimes operating in the after piece. Burleigh has been a bit ill since reaching New York, but if his sore thumb and finger permits of bearing down, he is likely to give his former teammates much trouble.

Today's Lineup

PIRATES	GIANTS
Bartell, s.	Fullis, l.
L. Waner, m.	Roush, m.
P. Waner, 1.	Lindstrom, 3.
Traynor, 3.	Terry, 1.
Grantham, 2.	Ott, r.
Brickell, r.	Jackson, s.
Comorosky, l.	O'Farrell, c.
Hemsley, c.	Cohen, 2.
Kremer or Grimes, p.	Fitzsimmons or Hubbell, p.

Manager McGraw is expected to call upon Fred Fitzsimmons and Carl Hubbell, the same two flingers who worked a double-header against the Cubs a few days ago.

George Grantham probably will play in one of the games, but he may be rested in the other provided Hubbel does his stuff. The Arizona speedboy is not a speedy member these days, owing to his lameness, and he is unable to throw naturally on account of a stoved shoulder.

LOOK TO SECOND MONEY

The Buccos are six full games ahead of the New Yorkers in the scramble for second place and the money that goes with this position. The rapid gait of the Cubs, who won again yesterday, has caused the members of the Pittsburgh and New York teams to forget about the Bruins while they try to outdo each other.

The Pirates still have four games to play before they return home to meet the Cubs. A single game with the Giants will windup for the Pirates at the Polo Grounds tomorrow. Monday is an open date on the Pittsburgh card, but Donie Bush will take his team to Bridgeport for an exhibition game with the Eastern League Club of that city.

Tuesday will find the Pirates back in Philly for their last game of the season in that hotbed of homers and fence-drives of varying description. At the conclusion of this contest, the Pirates will head for home to clash with the Cubs.

SWEDES WIN ANOTHER

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—The Swedish yacht, Bacchant, sailed by Eric Lundberg, won the second successive race in the free-for-all series in the 30-square meter class for the Hovey and Williams cup here yesterday. The victory was the fifth successive one in the international series entered by the Bacchant.

LOTT-DOEG IN NEWPORT DOUBLES FINAL

TILDEN-HUNTER SEMI-FINAL LOSERS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, and Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., who were ranked above Big Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter in the United States lawn tennis 1928 doubles list, administered a sound straight-set trouncing to the veterans in the semi-final round of the Newport Casino invitation team play, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, yesterday.

They led all through the match after the third game in the first set. Their points were scored, not by playing to Hunter's notorious weaknesses, his backhand and overhead strokings, but directly against the old master himself.

The victory placed Lott and Doeg in the doubles final for the second consecutive time, they having won last year's contest.

Fritz Mercur, of Harrisburg, Pa., and J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., were the other team to enter the final bracket, defeating J. Brooks Fenno, Jr., of Boston, and E. W. Feibleman, of New York, in an extra set match, 3-6, 6-2, 7-5, 6-2.

In the singles play, Tilden and Lott, the defending champion, advanced to the final. The former had an easy semi-final session with his pupil, W. F. Coen, Jr., of Kansas City. Tilden's scores were 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

Lott, however, had a hard court tussle with Johnny Van Ryn, whom he defeated in last year's final. The former Princeton star forced him to go through an extra set before he won the match, 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4.

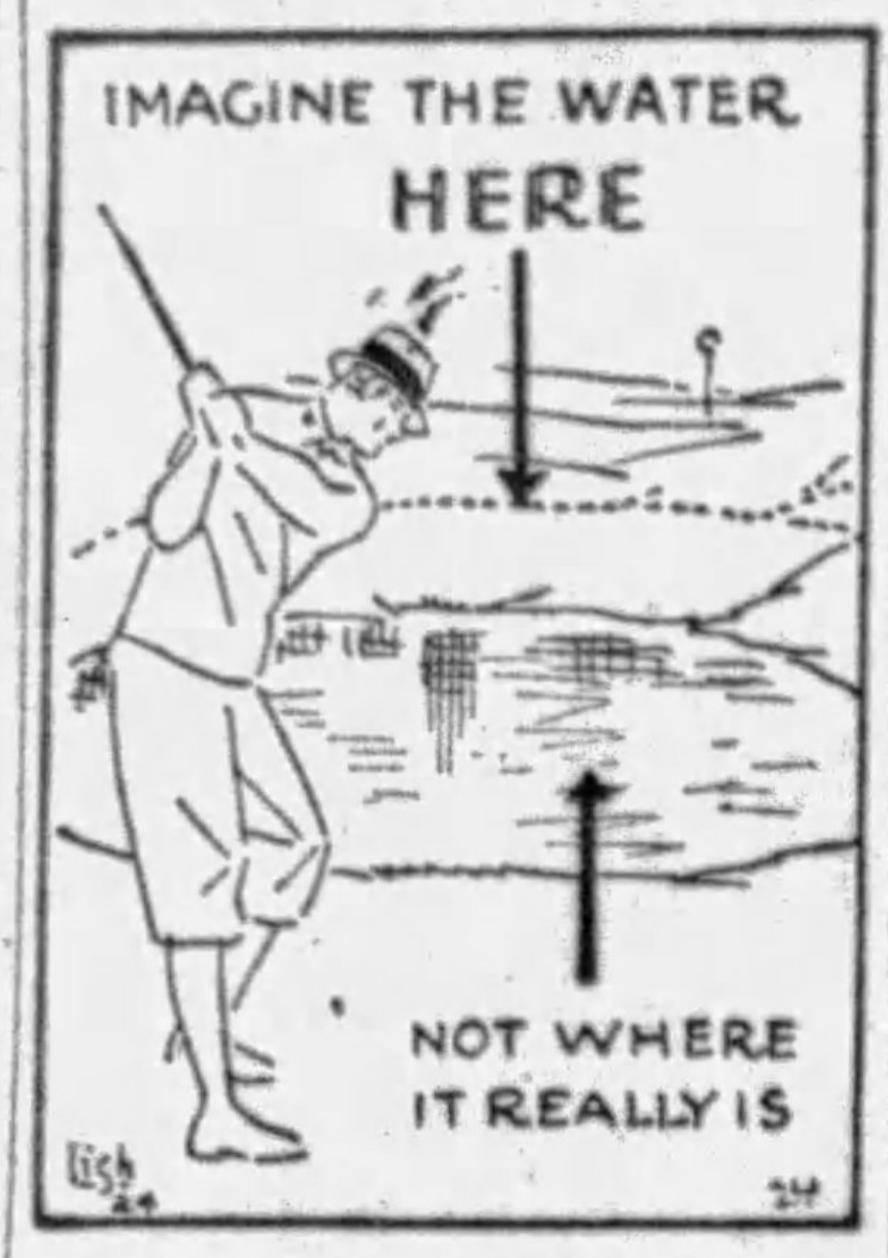
GOLF
AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT



How should a hole with a water hazard be played?

Answered by

WILLIE HUNTER,

Member and captain British international golf team for several years, the man who introduced golf into British East and South Africa, and New South Wales.

In playing holes in which a water hazard figures, always over-estimate the distance of the shot, in your own mind. Water always is deceptive and even an experienced player on a familiar water hole often fails to judge correctly. Most water holes are purely mental hazards. It is only seldom that the water constitutes any actual hazard or is really hard to get over. In playing such a hole, put the water out of your mind after measuring the distance and play the shot without any thought except to get on the green.

HELLER LOSES TO SHEA

GREENSBURG, Aug. 24.—A chilling rain, pelting these arid fairways, washed young Lawrence Heller out of further interest in the Westmoreland County amateur golf championship yesterday.

Two things occurred to the tan-skinned youth who won the medalist honors in the qualifying round. One of them was the rain; the other F. J. Shea, of the Greensburg Country Club. Shea defeated Heller, 2 and 1, in the second round of match play.

In the morning, Denny St. Clair, of Kiski, Western Pennsylvania junior champion, defeated S. A. Carson, Greensburg, 4 and 3, and later J. A. Robertshaw by a similar score to enter the semi-finals.

W. F. Marks, Kiski, eliminated Paul Euwer, of Jeannette, 6 and 5.

The remaining match in the championship flight was won by James W. Crookston, Greensburg, state amateur champion in 1927 and 1928, who defeated James F. Lutterell, home club titleholder, 1 up, after 19 holes of play.

Rain Halts Public Parks Net Play

BUFFALO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—George J. Jennings, Jr., Chicago, present champion, was leading Robert B. Considine, of Washington, D. C., in one of the semi-final round singles matches in the National public parks tennis championship here yesterday when a sudden rainstorm stopped the contest and prevented further play. The Chicago player won the first set 8-6, and stood 3 to 2, and 40-30 in the second set.

The team of Milford J. Meyer and Gus G. Amsterdam, of Philadelphia, won the opening set, 6-3, from Harry Schaberg and Robert Norton, St. Louis, in a quarter-final match in the men's doubles and took the first game of the second set when rain stopped their play.

In addition to the incompleted matches, Jack Castle, Buffalo veteran, will oppose Jack Delara, Los Angeles southpaw, in the remaining semi-final singles match this afternoon.

Fight Results

At Erie—Tiny DeBolt defeated Johnny Mack, 10 rounds; Harry Fuller and Henry Firpo drew, 10 rounds; Mike Mulligan and Matty Oldach drew, 6 rounds; Chip Freeman and Rudy Hayes drew, 6 rounds; Frank Bojorski knocked out (technical) Joey Miller, 4 rounds.

Schedule for Today.
SECTION I.
No games scheduled.
SECTION II.
Duquesne Light at Mount Lebanon; Minnetonka at College Avenue; Westinghouse Seconds at Wilkinsburg.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Competition this afternoon will wind up the 1929 schedule of action in the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League, save for a lone postponed tussle in Section I and a couple more in Section II. Today's program calls for play in the lower division only, the xital P. A. A.-South Hills tussle being still indefinitely in the offing, though likely to be staged within a week or so.

Last Saturday's startling upset of the hitehrto pace-setting Wilkinsburg host by Russ Unger's Mount Lebanon array scarmbled matters considerably in the Section II chase and placed entirely new complexion on the cavorting. With the Lebanonites now nicely entrenched in first place and hostilities virtually over, indications are that the gonfalon, long thought safely tucked away in the Holy City, will land across the town. Mount Lebanon has but one contest left—today's affair with faltering Duquesne Light contingent that last week went down by a 9-0 count before the onslaught of College avenue. Should the Unger outfit blank the Utilities crew, Wilkinsburg will be forced to overwhelm both Westinghouse Seconds, this afternoon's opponent, and Minnetonka without dropping one singles or doubles verdict of the 18 to be reeled off in order to terminate in a tie with the Mountmen. Tough prospect!

DIFFERENT TASK

The two trophy-seekers stand favored to cop handily today, but Wilkinsburg faces a more difficult task than does Mount Lebanon. Westinghouse gave the Burgers a scare in the revious meeting between the twain, the Electrics taking the short end of a hotly-fought 6-3 fracas, while Mount Lebanon trimmed Duquesne Light, 7-2, on the first swing' round the loop.

In the other circuit fray slated, College Avenue will strive to extend its win streak to three in taking on Minntoenka on the College-and-Walnut courts. The East Enders appear to have struck stride of late and at the moment cast covetous eyes at third position in the standing, a notch currently held by Westinghouse with fair margin to spare. Bill Hinkle, George Kaufmann, and Sam Keller, however, have begun to break into the victory column with regularity for the Moore combine with result that may prove disastrous to Westinghouse hopes.

The Pittsburgh-Greensburg racquet tilt, postponed because of rain on the original date a fortnight ago, has been re-booked for the Greensburg Country Club rectangles tomorrow afternoon. Dave and John O'Loughlin, Marion Rinehart, and Whitey McLain—a P. A. A. Stanton Heights combination will uphold Steel City honors against "Tack" Hammer, Billy Ramsay, Don Snyder, and other stars of the home firmament. An exceedingly interesting argument seems inevitable. The engagement will be Pittsburgh's third inter-city joust of the year, Wheeling having been trimmed, 9-0, here last month, and Fairmont having been bumped, 6-2, at the Fairmont Country Club last Sunday. A session at Clarksburg, W. Va., between Pittsburgh and a Mountaineer delegation that has been unbeaten in a dozen starts is in the making for early September.

WHAT'S THIS?

A wise-crack for the book cropped up in the course of the Pittsburgh squad's melee with Fairmont. George Sawin, P. T. A., president and Westinghouse captain, was playing Winfree of Fairmont. Sawin is a hard and accurate driver and he was having distinctly an "on" day in his seance with the West Virginian, a much less experienced performer. A feminine spectator in the sizable gallery watched the procedure with growing unrest. Finally her indignation was no longer to be contained and she spoke out wrathfully, "That Pittsburgh man is a dirty player Look at him—he won't put the ball near enough to our man to let him hit it at all." Who says tennis is a ladies' game?

Bill Servick, Duquesne, Pa., netman, who will carry the colors of the University of Alabama next spring, is through with mixing camp life with tennis. Bill gave McCook Reed a terrific scrap in the Western Pennsylvania tourney late in June and was figured to progress quite a piece in the Western Maryland event at Mountain Lake Park a week or so ago. Bill and Sam Keller, Duke varsity court leader, set out for the mountain resort as afternoon wore on toward evening of the night before the opening of the tournament. Pushing deep into the Alleghenies, they determined to remain till morning in a tourist camp and sleep in a tent. Servick felt no ill effects of this unique of training till the middle of his first set with Bill Weber of Clarksburg the next morning. At that point in the proceedings, however, he began to feel faint. A blistering sun scorched down from cloudless heavens and ere many minutes had passed, Bill was one deathly sick citizen. He stuck it out as long as he could, finally blowing the set and the initial game of frame two. Then, fearing that he would collapse on the court, he conceded the verdict by default and thus wound up an auspicious Pittsburgh bid for laurels that Marion Rinehart was later to lose before the well-calculated attack of B. F. Arkle, youthful ace of Wheeling.

Dormont, Stephens Sandlot Victors

Dormont defeated the Chicago Ranger Girls, 4 to 2, in an interesting game at Dormont last night. The hitting of Kress and Fuchs featured.

How Cubs, Athletics Can Clinch Pennants

NATIONAL LEAGUE
GAMES TO PLAY

CUBS—40—With Pittsburgh, 6; with New York, 4; with St. Louis, 7; with Brooklyn, 4; with Cincinnati, 11; with Philadelphia, 5; with Boston, 4.

PIRATES—40—With Chicago, 6; with New York, 7; with St. Louis, 7; with Brooklyn, 6; with Cincinnati, 5; with Philadelphia, 3, with Boston, 5.

THEIR lead 11 full games as a result of beating the Phils yesterday while the Pirates were idle, the Cubs need 30 victories out of their remaining 40 games to clinch the pennant. The Pirates could not pass them even if they won all of their remaining 40 games. The standing at the finish would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
CHICAGO	108	46	.701
PITTSBURGH	107	47	.695

SHOULD the Cubs hit a slump and win only 20 out of their remaining 40 games, the Pirates would have to win 31 out of 40 to finish in the front. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PITTSBURGH	98	56	.636
CHICAGO	97	57	.630

AMERICAN LEAGUE
GAMES TO PLAY

ATHLETICS—34—With New York, 7; with Cleveland, 4; with St. Louis, 4; with Detroit, 3; with Washington, 4; with Chicago, 6; with Boston, 6.

YANKEES—38—With Philadelphia, 7; with Cleveland, 5; with St. Louis, 6; with Detroit, 5; with Washington, 8; with Chicago, 4; with Boston, 5.

ALTHOUGH again defeated by the White Sox yesterday, the Athletics gained ground. The Yanks, by losing to the Browns, reduced the number of wins needed by the A's to clinch the flag. The A's, 12 games in front, need 25 out of 34 games to take the flag. The Yanks could not pass them if they won all of their 39. The standing at the finish would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PHILADELPHIA .	108	46	.701
NEW YORK	107	47	.695

SHOULD the A's win only 17 out of their remaining 34 games, the Yankees would have to win 32 out of 38 to finish in the front. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
NEW YORK	101	53	.656
PHILADELPHIA .	100	54	.649

(EVERY GAME THE PIRATES AND YANKEES LOSE FROM NOW UNTIL THE END OF THE SEASON MEANS ONE LESS VICTORY THE CUBS AND ATHLETICS WILL NEED TO CLINCH THE PENNANTS IN THEIR RESPECTIVE LEAGUES.)

CUBS GAIN; A'S LOSE FOURTH IN ROW

By HENRY M'LEMORE
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—This, according to no less an authority than George Herman Ruth, is a "left-handed" baseball year.

Meaning that things are going perfectly—wrong.

If interviewed today Mr. Ruth would no doubt go even further and designate 1929 as "two left-handed years," for along with his various ailments, worry over next year's contract and the general depression of his beloved Yankees, Mr. Ruth now has another fret.

This time in the form of Hack (One-Round) Wilson, most pugnacious of the Chicago Cubs.

For no sooner had the Babe overtaken Chuck Klein, of the Phillies, in the little matter of home runs than along comes Hack with his thirty-third of the season, tying the whole affair into a neat bow-knot and furnishing Mr. Ruth with another rival to be overcome.

CUBS BEAT PHILS

Wilson's tying blow came as the Cubs whipped the Phillies, 6 to 1. Hornsby and Taylor also hit for the circuit. The win increased the Cubs' lead over second-place Pittsburgh another half notch.

Behind the seven-hit flinging of Bob Smith, the Braves trounced the Cards, 5 to 2, and evened the series at 1-1. Jess Haines caused no little excitement by hitting a homer.

New York and Pittsburgh and Brooklyn and Cincinnati will play double-headers today to make up for the rainy day postponement of yesterday.

New York and Philadelphia continue to be easy pickings for the weaker clubs around the American circuit. New York suffered its second successive shutout yesterday when Blaeholder limited them to five hits, while his teammates rapped Pennock and Moore for five runs.

A'S BEATEN AGAIN

Philadelphia did little better, dropping a 3-to-1 decision to the White Sox. It was the Athletic's fourth straight setback and their sixth defeat in their last seven games. It marked their longest losing streak of the year. McKain, recruit hurler, spiked the Mack's artillery, allowing only five hits.

Sam Jones and Earl Whitehill engaged in a pitching duel and though Whitehill allowed only four safeties Detroit lost, 1 to 0.

Danny MacFayden hurled the Red Sox to an 8-to-5 win over the Indians. The defeat dropped Cleveland to fourth place, St. Louis moving into the show position. Rothrock made four hits in five trips to the plate.

WORLD SWIM MARK SET

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—In smashing performances on the second day's program of the National A. A. U. swimming championships, a new world record was established and two new champions were crowned, while a titleholder retained his laurels.

Eleanor Holm, of New York, won the 300-yard medley exhibition for women in the time of 4 minutes, 25 3-5 seconds. This bettered the old mark by 12 3-5 seconds.

Clarence (Buster) Crabbe, blonde flash from the Outrigger Canoe Club, Honolulu, continued his spectacular bid for glory by winning the 440-yard free style and placing third in the 220-yard backstroke. Crabbe's time in the quarter mile test was 5 minutes and 4 seconds.

Frank Walton, of Hollywood, became the new champion in the 220-yard back stroke, replacing George Kojac, of New York City who did not enter the competition this year. Walton's time was 2 minutes 42 seconds.

Midwick Poloists In Tourney Final

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—The Midwick Club, of Pasadena, Cal., intercircuit title winners, and the Fort Leavenworth, Kan., champions of the Rocky Mountain circuit, will meet here tomorrow in the final of the national 12-goal polo tournament.

Midwick reached the final by defeating Oak Brook, of Chicago, 14 to 6.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(INS.)—Lieut. C. M. McFarland, of the Fort Hoyle, Md., polo team which is here for the tournament at Onwentsia, was seriously injured in an automobile collision last night. Several ribs were broken and one lung punctured.

In Semi

RAY KISER

Ray will meet Ray when Ray Kiser, stablemate of Tony Herrera, boxes Ray Newton, of Mansfield, O., in the eight-round semi-final to the Herrera-Gaston Charles bout in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night. Kiser, a newcomer, is highly touted. He formerly attended the University of Oklahoma.

NEWMAN WINS BIG SHOOT

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 24.—Pennsylvania's delegation of 59 shooters participating in the thirtieth annual Grand American handicap here yesterday, displayed good form, but none was able to land among the leaders. F. Neaville, Pittsburgh, showed the best eye, smashing the clays for a score of 95, three less than that obtained by Mose Newman, Sweetwater, Tex., who broke 98. He was tied with five other shooters and in the shootoff, Newman made a perfect run of 25 targets to land the highest prize within the gift of trapdom to bestow.

Butler Fair Races Are Called Off

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 24.—Heavy rains early this morning and again at noon caused the postponement of the third and final days' racing at the Butler Fair and Exposition. Officials, after a conference, declared the races off and paid off the drivers, according to the National Trotting Association rules. It is the first time in many years that only one day's racing was held.

SHIKAT WINS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Dick Shikat, German giant, defeated Jim Londos, Greek grappler, of St. Louis, in a one-fall wrestling match here last night.

BOWL TO TEST OUT-OF-TOWN BOXERS

The drawing power of two out-of-town boxers pitted against each other will be tested at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, Monday night, when Tony Herrera, the Mexican lightweight star, of Chicago, meets Gaston Charles, of France, in the 10-round main bout. The club is figuring on Herrera's great popularity in this section offsetting that usually objectionable feature. Few windups in which both principals have been out-of-towners have proved profitable here in the past.

The Herrera-Charles bout is well backed up. Ray Kiser, of Chicago, stablemate of Herrera, meets Ray Newton, of Mansfield, O., in the eight-round semi-final. In the two six-rounders, Tivie Miller, formerly of Youngstown, but now of Pittsburgh, boxes Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, and Bob Collura, of Beechview, tangles with Young Joe Walcott, of Washington, Pa.

Herrera and Charles will arrive in Pittsburgh tomorrow morning, the former coming from Chicago and the latter from New York.

Midget Mike O'Dowd, of Louisville, who recently defeated Johnny Datto again at Cincinnati, has been matched with Freddie Miller there next Tuesday night and they are looking for a big gate.

DAVIES AT TORONTO

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, who trounced Frankie Genaro, one of the flyweight title claimants, at the Meyers Bowl, his last time out, leaves tonight with his manager, Jim Buchanan, for Toronto, Canada, where Willie boxes Luis Carpentero, the Filipino, of Toledo, again Monday night. On September 5, Davies boxes Genaro Pino, the Cuban, at Junction Park, New Brighton.

Francis Flynn, the Moose Temple promoter, is figuring on using Jack Wells, Red Mason's new heavyweight, against Harry Williams, the Negro star, in the main bout of his opening show, one week from next Friday night.

Socko Trenaman, Cumberland heavyweight, is training with K. O. Christner, at Bedford, Pa., for his eight-round bout with Stanley Simmons, at Cumberland, next Thursday night. Buddy Crass, Cumberland southpaw lightweight, meets Buck Griffith, also of Cumberland, in the eight-round windup, and, in another eight-rounder, Chuck Zelnack, of Glassport, opposes Buster Reed, of Mt. Savage. Eck Miers and Joe Newhouse box the four-round opener. The show will be held in the armory.

BOXERS SEEK BOUTS

Frank J. Lynn, of Atlantic City, and formerly of Wilmerding, plans a trip here soon with his stable of boxers and would like to hear from the promoters of this district. He may be reached in care of the Green's Hotel, Atlantic City, N. J. He handles Frankie (Kid) Anslem, Central American flyweight; Sammy Novia, bantamweight; Bobby Wolgast, featherweight; Gene Moretti, welterweight; Frankie (Tiger) Theodore, middleweight, and Mike Sullivan, heavyweight. All have boxed the stars in their classes in the East.

MISS NORELIUS SWIM VICTOR

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—In her first major professional competition, Martha Norelius, of New York, former amateur athletic star and holder of an Olympic title, won the Wrigley 10-mile swim for women in Lake Ontario here yesterday.

Taking the lead from the start, Miss Norelius outswam and outlasted a field of 45 women from the United States and Canada to capture first prize money of $10,000.

Three-hundred yards behind the leader came Ruth Tower, of Denver, while in third place, a mile behind Miss Norelius, was Mrs. Evelyn Armstrong, of Detroit, mother of two young children. Fourth place went to 17-year-old Leah Riley, of Keansburg, N. J., and fifth place to Ethel Hertle, of New York, winner of the event last year. Second place carried a cash award of $3,000; third place, $1,000; fourth place $600; and fifth, $400.

Covering the 10 miles—five times around a two mile rectangular course—in five hours 24 minutes, 22 seconds, Miss Norelius clipped nearly 10 minutes off Miss Hertle's winning time last year.

Fairmont Releases Two; Suspends One

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Aug. 24.—(AP.)—Joe Phillips, manager of the Fairmont club of the Mid-Atlantic League, last night released two and suspended one of the club's outstanding players for alleged breaking of training rules.

Art Mueller, catcher and leading hitter of the Black Diamonds, and Walter Beall, pitcher who saw service with the New York Yankees and Washington Senators before coming to Fairmont this year, were released outright. Julius Solters, outfielder and leading home-run hitter of the league, was suspended for the remainder of the season.

Sullivan, Mastro Win Chicago Bouts

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(AP.)—My Sullivan, St. Paul's challenger for the world welterweight title, scored a technical nockout over the hitherto undefeated Roxy Allen, of Camden, N. J., in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-round bout in the Chicago Stadium last night.

Earl Mastro of Chicago, won recognition as a leading challenger for the world's featherweight championship, by defeating Eddie Shea, rival Chicagoan, in a blistering 10-round battle.

MRS. CURRY COPS TITLE

MRS. BLAIR IS BEATEN BY 1 UP

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

A small gallery, although it numbered almost 300, braved the inclement weather of yesterday to see Mrs. Margaret Curry and Mrs. Evans Blair play their 36-hole match for the women's city championship, over the Schenley Park municipal links.

Mrs. Curry, playing a valiant game, came through victor in the close contest, having a margin of advantage of 1 up at the end of the contest. She succeeds Miss E. Lucille Bejach as champion.

WELL MATCHED

Playing under distressing weather conditions, the finalists did not score exceptionally well—but they were well matched and made merry of the battle. Mrs. Curry totalled 178 for the 36 holes, while Mrs. Blair was only one stroke worse.

They were each out in 44 in the morning and home in the same number of strokes for a fine pair of 88s, being all even at the turn as well as at the end of the first round. Going out in the afternoon, Mrs. Curry scored a 45 against Mrs. Blair's 47, being 2 up as they started homeward. Mrs. Curry needed 45 to Mrs. Blair's 44 for the laast nine, giving the champion a 90 and the runnerup a 91.

Mrs. Curry won the tenth, but Mrs. Blair came back to cop the eleventh and twelfth. Mrs. Curry took the thirteenth and fourteenth and her opponent copped the fifteenth. They halved the sixteenth, and Mrs. Blair was dormie 1 after winning seventeenth. They halved the last hole. Their cards:

MRS. CURRY DRIVING OFF ON FINAL HOLE

Mrs. Margaret Curry and Mrs. Eva Blair engaged in one of the keenest final matches in local women's golf history yesterday when they battled through to the final green at Schenley Park before Mrs. Blair conceded defeat by a margin of 1 up in 36 holes. They were all square at the end of the morning round. Both rounds were played for the most part in driving rain. Mrs. Curry succeeds Miss E. Lucille Bejach as city champion as a result of her victory. She eliminated Miss Bejach in the semi-final round, 1 up, in 19 holes, Thursday, this figuring in two consecutive grueling matches.

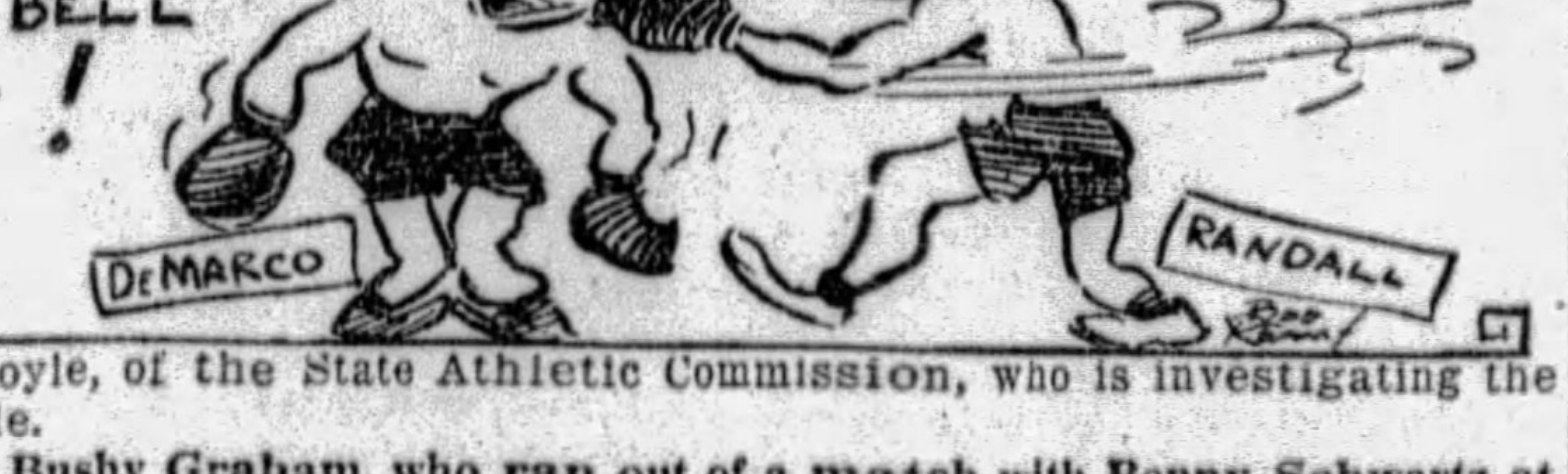
winter, but couldn't agree on terms when they sounded out the Garden on the subject.

SINCE the Cubs have recalled Slug Tolson from Los Angeles to fill in for Lefty Grimm, who was foolish enough to break a hand against the grandstand with a world series staring him in his German countenance, the fans have been up a tree wondering if Tolson came by that nickname honestly or vice versa. In other words, whether it was handed him because of his batting ability or because he tried to put the slug on somebody for dough.

"WELL," as Donie probably has remarked to himself more than once during these tortuous weeks, "there'll be a Bush in the world series, anyway. If I can't pull for myself to beat those Athletics, I can be rooting for Guy Bush to come through—and how!" And, by the way, the slump of the Pirates probably will take all of the kick out of the Kid Chocolate-Al Singer fight in New York next week for Donie Bush. The Pirate manager is one of the Keed's original pluggers and is on record as predicting that he'll be one of our champions one of these days.

JACK ZIVIC, Luke Carney, his manager, and Dave McConnell, who met Jack in that bout at Clarksburg, W. Va., a week ago last night, have a hearing scheduled for today before Commissioner Havey J. Boyle, of the State Athletic Commission, who is investigating the battle.



THE BELL!- I HEAR THE BELL !
SOCK !
CLANG!
DeMARCO
RANDALL

Bushy Graham, who ran out of a match with Benny Schwartz at the Meyers Bowl week before last and then fought Eddie O'Dowd in Columbus last Monday night, boxes Vidal Gregorio in Philadelphia next Monday night. By all rights, and wrongs, too, he should be on the suspended list in this state.

"HOW is it," inquires one of those birds who always wants to know about such things, "that Cuddy DeMarco, in his befuddled condition after being knocked down, was able to hear the bell ending the second round and Tiger Joe Randall, who knocked him down, didn't hear it and socked him after it clanged, thus losing the fight on a foul?" Well, it may be that Cuddy was listening for it.

IT HAD to be some ghost from the past like Molla Mallory that would horn in and spoil a return match between Helen Wills and Betty Nuthall by beating the English star in the National Singles tournament. There ought to be a law against having such things happen.

MRS. BRANDON IS VICTOR

BUTLER, Aug. 24.—Playing over the new 18-hole course at the Butler Country Club, Mrs. H. A. Brandon, of Butler, won the first division trophy in the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania tournament here yesterday. Mrs. Brandon had a low score of 89-9—80.

Second place went to Mrs. J. M. Irwin, of Edgewood, 96-14—82, while Mrs. C. I. Wendt, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, 95-10—85, was tied for third, with Mrs. R. M. Kerschner, of Stanton Heights, 99-14—85.

Mrs. D. Beatty, of Warren, took first in the second division, with a 99-22—77; Mrs. Porter Kier, of Oakmont, was second, 101-20—81, while Miss Painter, of Kittanning, was third, with 101-18—83.

Low gross in the third division went to Mrs. Ferne, of Kittanning, with 114-30—84; Mrs. Reynolds, of Kittanning, and Mrs. Bochart, of Stanton Heights, were tied for second with nets of 85, and Mrs. Mansfield, of the Youghiogheny Country Club was third with 108-22—86.

N. Y. C. Lines' Meet Program Extensive

The sixth annual track meet of the New York Central Lines' athletic associations, of which there are a total of 57, scattered all over the system, this year is to be held in Pittsburgh on Wednesday, September 18, at the Stadium.

These affairs attract a large out-of-town attendance, it being estimated that, in addition to the 800 entries, the transient visitors this year will number 12,000 who will come from every quarter of the territory traversed by the New York Central Lines from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi river.

The competitors will arrive the day before the meet and the visiting employes the morning of the day of the meet, all returning late that night.

Eight bands will be in attendance, the members of which are all employes from the various cities and towns located on the system.

The preliminaries at the Stadium will start at 10 a. m., the parade of contestants and committees at 1 p. m., concert by massed bands at 1:30 and the finals at 2, Pittsburgh daylight time.

Following the track meet there will be a dinner at the William Penn Hotel at which 1,500 will be present, including the 800 contestants. At the end of the meal the prizes will be awarded the winning athletic associations and individuals.

After the dinner there will be a dance in the Pirate Room of the hotel.

RADIO WEDDING SET SEPT. 3

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Unique among broadcasts will be a complete church wedding ceremony which radio station WOL is preparing to give to its listeners Tuesday, September 3, when Robert V. Howard, connected with WOL since its foundation four years ago and recently named musical director of Shady Side Academy, Pittsburgh, marries Miss Hazel VicRoy, of Clarendon, Va.

Not only will the entire service be broadcast from the Calvary Baptist Church, but a description of the decorations and of the costumes of the bride and her attendants will be included.

Howard is probably the senior announcer and operator in Washington. He has severed his connections with radio to go to Shady Side. He entered the service of WOL when that station was established.

Miss VicRoy is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. VicRoy, of Clarendon, and is well known among the younger social set of Arlington County, Va., as well as in Washington. The wedding has been arranged so that the tens of thousands of friends of the popular announcer may "attend."

The Rev. Homer J. Councillor, assistant pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. George H. Fieldman, of the Clarendon Methodist Episcopal Church.

36 Races Carded For Cambria Fair

EBENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 24.—The book for the six-day meeting of the Cambria County Fair, which opens September 2, is being sent to horsemen today.

It calls for 36 races, or six events daily. Post time has been set for 2:30 p. m., which was the hour for starting during the six-day summer meeting held the first week of last month.

CUE LEAGUE PLANNED

Amateur pocket billiard players wishing to participate in league competition this season are requested to write J. C. Ebner, 345 Division street, Bellevue.

"Cub Reporter" Features Radio Bills Tonight

By DARREL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

RECALLING the day when we thought it polite to ask permission to go through a fire line and also of our search for the weather bureau on the roof tower of the Oliver Building, we have sharp reminiscences of the possibilities in "The Cub Reporter" broadcast to be inaugurated over KDKA at 9 tonight.

Every aspiring newspaperman has humiliating experiences, sometimes so grotesque in their nature that they furnish laughs for years to come. We hope that the writer of "The Cub Reporter" has not overlooked any of this rich lore.

Louis Kaufman, whose "Haunting Melody" will have an Hawaiian musical background tonight at 7:30, KDKA, will tune in on the feature out in Atlantic City, where he has gone for a few days' rest.

Ethelbert Nevin's "At Rest" will be sung by Gladys Rice on the General Electric hour, WCAE, at 9. This station also will give us Phil Spitalny at 7 p. m.

"Our Navy Outlook" is the subject of the assistant secretary of the Navy on the WJAS National Forum at 10 o'clock.

Tinkling castanets and other exotic sound effects will emanate from the loudspeaker, WJAS at 10:30, when Jesse Crawford plays the Spanish favorite, "La Paloma."

We Now Present

Anticipating a big catch in the Ligonier woods a few years hence, Walter C. Evans, chief of radio operations for Westinghouse, has purchased a Llewelyn setter pup. Mr. Evans describes "Shorty" as a high-brow bird dog not any larger, at present, than two ham sandwiches. When "Shorty" grows up with his long toothpick legs he will have to be renamed.

"Shorty" already shows signs of being a good hunting dog. With a command from Mr. Evans he will search the homestead at Midway Drive, Dormont, from cellar to garret until he finds Barbara Jean, Mr. Evans' very cute three-year-old daughter. Barbara and "Shorty" have become fast friends. Though "Shorty" must take a few hard bumps in his role of rag doll substitute, he leads a good dog's life.

Lillian Bardoner, formerly musical director of WCAE, and a very sweet girl, is engaged to marry R. Will Humphreys the latter part of this month.

Cliff J. Ryan, formerly a sports writer, now a press agent, leaned on our desk long enough last night to criticize radio voices. Cliff expressed sorrow for John B. Daniel's death, praised Milt Cross and Alois Havrilla. He panned the "circus barker" on KQV's National Amusement Park program and lit heavily on Frances C. Owen at WJAS.

About Owen. If ever an announcer had a split camp, he's the fellow. Every fan is either for him or against him; few are on the fence. Personally Owen is a great fellow—five feet, nine inches tall, heavy mustache, curly hair, blue eyes, and a hankering for red sox, red ties and white shirts. His complex personality makes one like him or dislike him, and Owen's just that way himself, he either likes or doesn't like, and will make no bones about saying just what he thinks. Candid is the word.

Comes to our desk a neat folder from Virginia Kendrick, titian contralto, of 2869 Castlegate avenue, who won the National Federation of Music Club's contest at Boston. Virginia's winsome smile graces page one. Page two tells about her success in radio and in the concert world. Page three is a specimen program of her repertoire, ranging from the light classical to opera. A most natural pose depicting the spirit of Spring appears on page four. A very neat job and we compliment Miss Kendrick on her taste and arrangement.

Either KDKA or WCAE will broadcast the finish of the Women's Air Derby in Cleveland Monday afternoon. The time is uncertain.

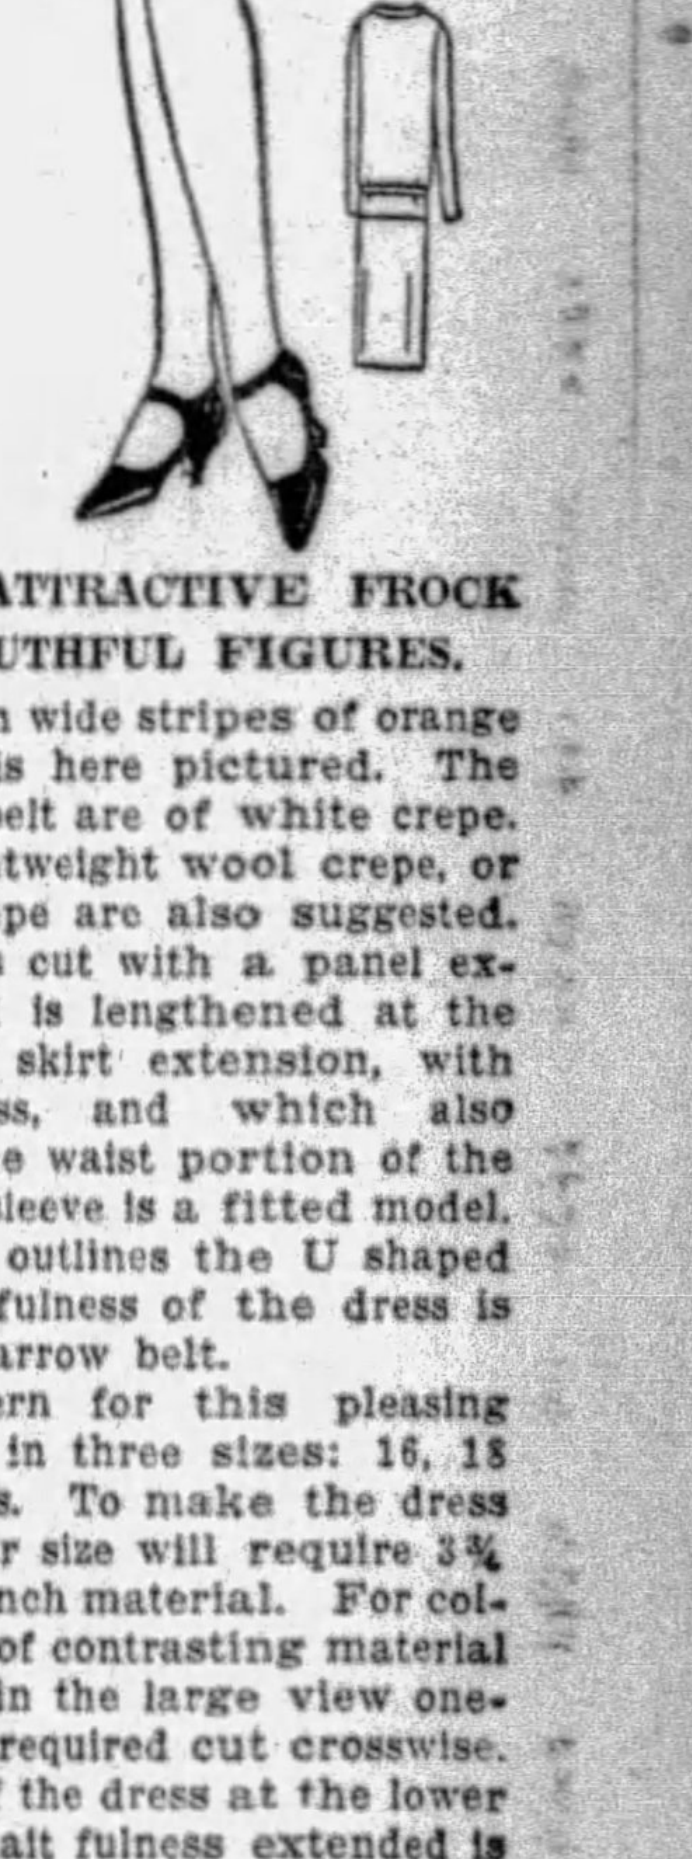
The Sun-Telegraph Fifteen Cent Pattern



A VERY ATTRACTIVE FROCK FOR YOUTHFUL FIGURES.

Tub silk in wide stripes of orange and white is here pictured. The collar and belt are of white crepe. Pongee, lightweight wool crepe, or flat silk crepe are also suggested. The front is cut with a panel extension, and is lengthened at the sides by a skirt extension, with plait fulness, and which also lengthens the waist portion of the back. The sleeve is a fitted model. A tie collar outlines the U shaped neck. The fulness of the dress is held by a narrow belt.

The pattern for this pleasing style is cut in three sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. To make the dress for a 16-year size will require 3¾ yards of 32-inch material. For collar and belt of contrasting material as pictured in the large view one-half yard is required cut crosswise. The width of the dress at the lower edge with plait fulness extended is 60 inches.

COUPON.

This pattern will be sent on receipt of 15 cents (silver or 2c and 1c stamps). Make number, name, address, etc., plain. Send to Pattern Department, The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

People I Love

HEAR now, my Daughter, my Hymn of Love.

For, the people whom I envy are many, and the people whom I hate are few. But, the people whom I LOVE are legion!

Verily, I love all those thoughtful souls, who enclose self-addressed envelopes with their bills. For, the blow of the debt is softened by that act of generosity; and they receive their checks by return mail.

* * *

I love all hotel clerks who greet me with a smile of welcome and forbear to serve the ice at the desk. Yea, they are more cheering to the spirit than fine linen and much clean towels, or a thousand brass buttons.

HELEN ROWLAND

I love all POSTMEN. For lo, the postman walketh many weary miles and carryeth a heavy load. Yet, who hath ever seen one of these, that was not full of graciousness and good cheer? Yea, he is more welcome than the first cup of coffee on the "morning after."

* * *

I love all sound-sleepers, who do not arise with the lark and awaken me with their matin-songs, their splashings and their lawnmowers; but the strenuous soul, who arouseth the house in the morning is a thorn in the flesh.

* * *

I love all people who do not keep radios. But, those who turn on the radio at my coming, and then start an animated conversation, are the soul-tormentors of modern life, more terrible than that saxophone-player.

* * *

I love the house-guest, who considereth my cook; who is always prompt for meals, and who eateth that which is set before him with relish. But the careless guest, who considereth not the servant in the house causeth his hostess tears of anguish.

I love all cheerful and amiable people, whatsoever their sins and weaknesses. But the cynic and the critic and the high-hatter do not IMpress me. They DEpress me. They are as too much vinegar in the salad.

* * *

I love all jolliers; and the skillful flatterer in my delight. For, howsoever patent his lies, I can swallow them. They are as wine to my vanity, and a sedative to my inferiority complex.

* * *

Verily, verily, I love all these, who praise my ways, admire my good taste, dispel my melancholy, applaud my cleverness, respond to mine affection and gladden my days!!

* * *

For, the merry and the gracious, and the kindly and the amiable may not ALWAYS be "worthy"—but they are always WELCOME!

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge at 'War Council' Called to Protect Mary

IT WAS fully 20 minutes before I was able to rejoin the Underwoods. Mother Graham suffered a natural reaction of nerves when I finally got her into bed after her fright at the unknown marauder's attempt to get into Mary's room, and it required all my experience to get her quieted so that I was sure she would fall asleep. When she finally professed herself ready to let me go, she put out a thin trembling hand and clutched mine.

"Mr. Underwood is very clever and kind," she faltered, "but he isn't our own. Promise me that you—"

Her voice died away, but I pressed her hand firmly.

"I promise that no harm shall come to Mary," I said, with the sensation of making a vow, and her hand relaxed.

"I can sleep now," she said, and I stooped and kissed her with a constriction in my throat at her trust in me, her inclusion of me as "our own." Not always had my mother-in-law thus regarded me.

Lillian was alone in Mary's room when I went back and something tense in her attitude told me that she was nervous and alarmed although her face was composed, and her voice was even nonchalant.

"Harry has gone outdoors to see what traces he can discover," she said. "He went directly after you left, so he ought to be back any minute."

But the minutes lengthened into another quarter of an hour before Mr. Underwood appeared. It was a tribute to his powers of moving noiselessly that we heard no sound of closing doors, or even of his footsteps until he was at the door. Lillian remained almost motionless as he came in, but her eyes were suddenly starry with relieved gladness, and I realized that she had been numb with terror for him during his absence.

"The fellow came in through that wood road which leads to the shack where 'me and me accomplice' hung out last Spring," Mr. Underwood said, and I felt suddenly cold at his reference to that time of sinister menace, that international plot against governments which had involved the Princess Olina and nearly ended Mr. Underwood's adventurous career. "I've had Jim out and we've traced his footprints—gee!—if this keeps up, I'm going to hire out as a movie sleuth!" He wiped his forehead with a melodramatic flourish of his handkerchief and grinned at us as he spoke. But I had noticed the tiny beads upon his forehead and knew that the gesture was no theatrical one. He was distinctly uneasy at the thing which had come to us so suddenly.

"There'll be no more trouble tonight," he said. "Jim's going to stay awake the rest of the night, and so shall I. I wonder if Mary can tell us her version of the thing now."

"I'll see," I said promptly, and hurried down the hall to my room.

"Yes, she's all right," Katherine said when I had put the query. "Bring them in, but don't linger any longer than you have to, any of you."

I went back with my message and the Underwoods came quickly with me to Mary's bedside.

"We won't stay two minutes," Mr. Underwood assured Katherine. "I just want to ask Mary a question or two."

"Go ahead," Katherine said, and he turned to Mary, looking up at him from her pillows.

"What first drew your attention to the window?" he asked. "Was there any noise of anybody climbing up?"

Mary shook her head.

"No, the first thing I heard was the sound of scraping against the screen," she said. "I didn't know what it was at first, thought it was a cat of something. But when I looked toward it I could see a hand—and—a knife or shears or something cutting at the screen, and a face looking in the room just as if it were hung there in space."

She shuddered, and Mr. Underwood put the next question quickly.

"Could you see the face? Would you know it again? There was a light in Lillian's room at the end—one we left—which threw a ray right outside your window."

"Yes, I know," Mary said. "It picked out his face, so I'd know it again anywhere."

"What was it like, Mary?" Lillian asked, and I knew that imperceptibly her husband had signaled her to take up the inquiry.

"It was a terrible face," Mary said, "like a rat's, a low forehead with sandy hair, partly gray, all tumbled over it, and a scar like a comma across the cheek."

"Just one thing more, Mary," Mr. Underwood said, and I knew that her answer had satisfied him.

"Did you scream before you got out of the room?"

Horoscopes

Monday, August 26

MONDAY'S astrological chart points to fairly interesting and prosperous conditions but these should not be negatived by an inclination to wrangle and bicker, nor to indulge distorted viewpoints. Be on guard against secret attacks.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly active and prosperous year, but they should not complicate affairs by indulging in strife and ill-temper. Likewise, be on guard against subtle or underhand attacks.

A child born on this day may be clever and hard-working but the inclination to impetuous and tempestuous behavior should be handled in early life. It may also be subject to malign and secret attacks.

Occasions do not make a man frail but they show what he is—A'Kempis.

Sunday, August 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent auguries for those in the employment of others, as well as for all manner of mystical and spiritual pursuits and avocations. It is fortunate for cultural and social activities.

Those whose birthday it is may expect promotion or preferment if in employment. It is propitious for launching new enterprises or dealings with large corporations or combines.

A child born on this day may have diversified talents and should reach important place in life, possibly in diplomatic service or with large interests.

Religion is not a lot of things that a man does, but a new life that he lives; not a thing for weak souls but a thing for the manliest soul.—Phillips Brooks.

When Cleaning Walls

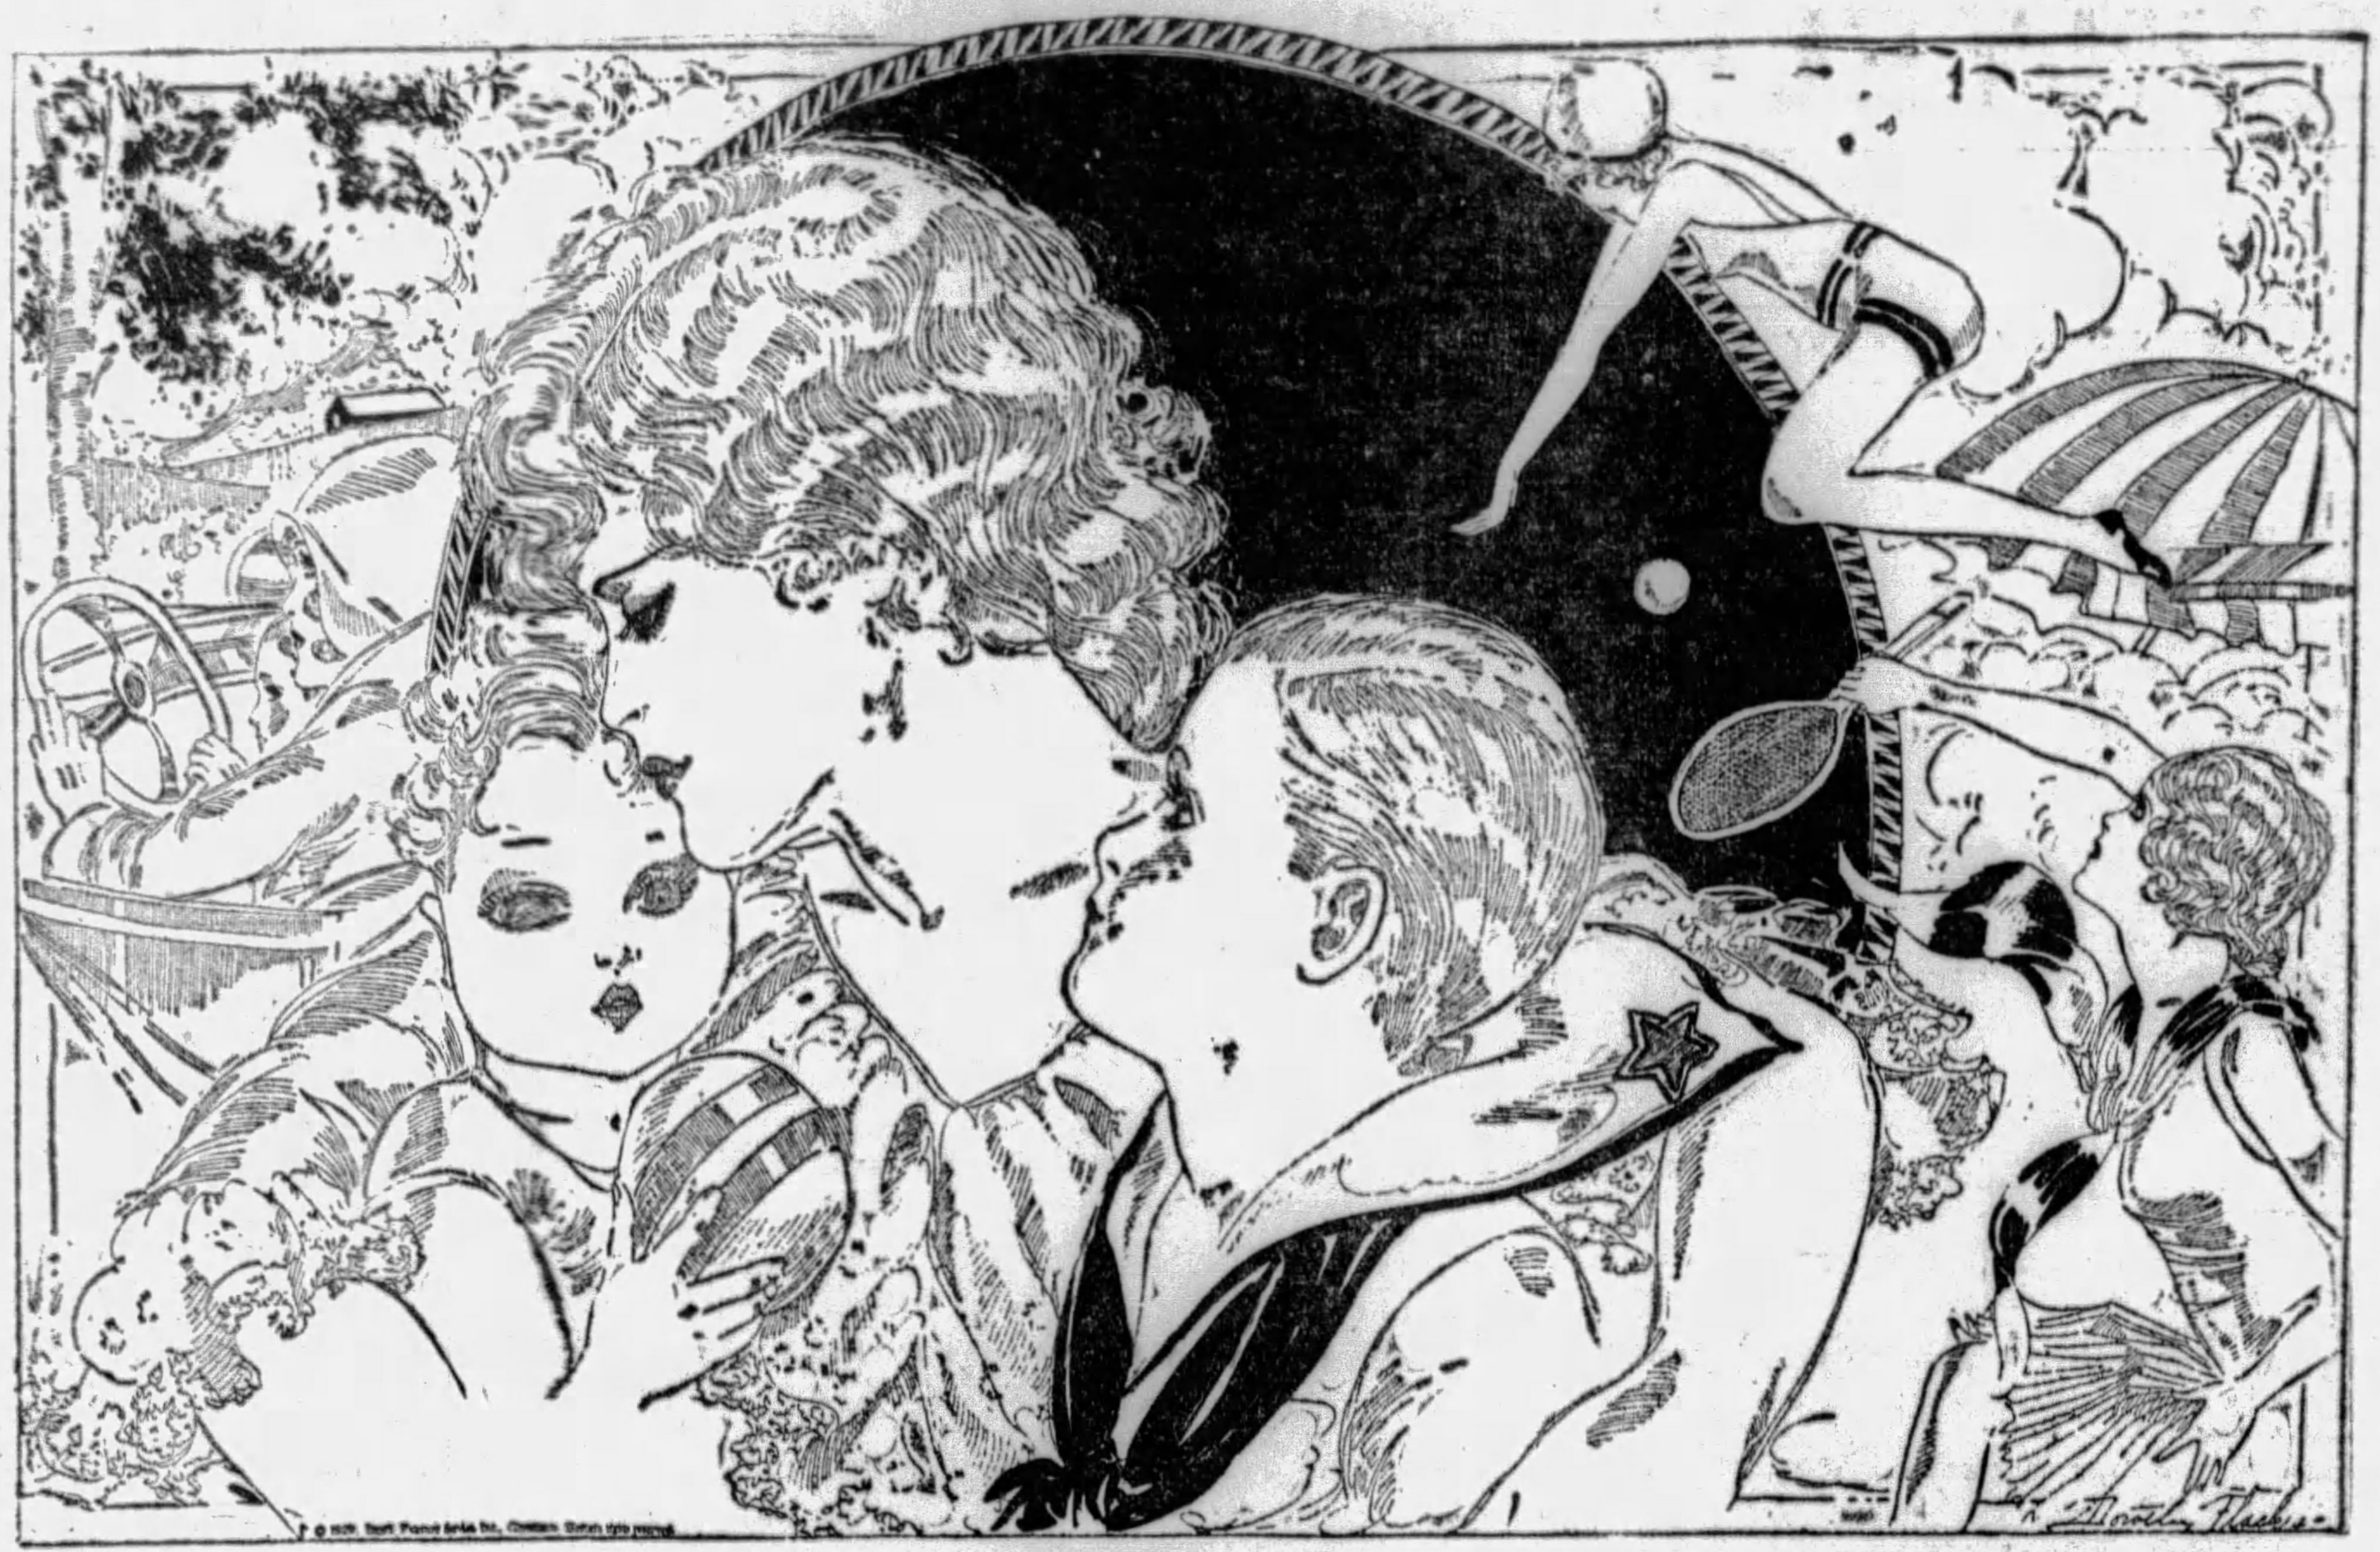
Your walls should be dusted weekly with a feather brush. When soiled, wallpapers can be cleaned and brightened by rubbing over with a ball of flour and water dough. Varnished papers should be washed over with soapy lather and wiped with a chamois leather wrung out of clean water, and left to dry.

Ebony Brushes

Before washing ebony brushes, rub the wood thoroughly with vaseline. This will prevent the ammonia or soda used in the washing water from spoiling the ebony.

THE MODERN MOTHER

Drawn by Dorothy Flack



GONE are the days when Mother is pictured as a sweet, self effacing little lady whose sole thought is home and who never goes out, but martyr-like gives up all the things she once enjoyed so that her family can make a nice little door-mat of her.

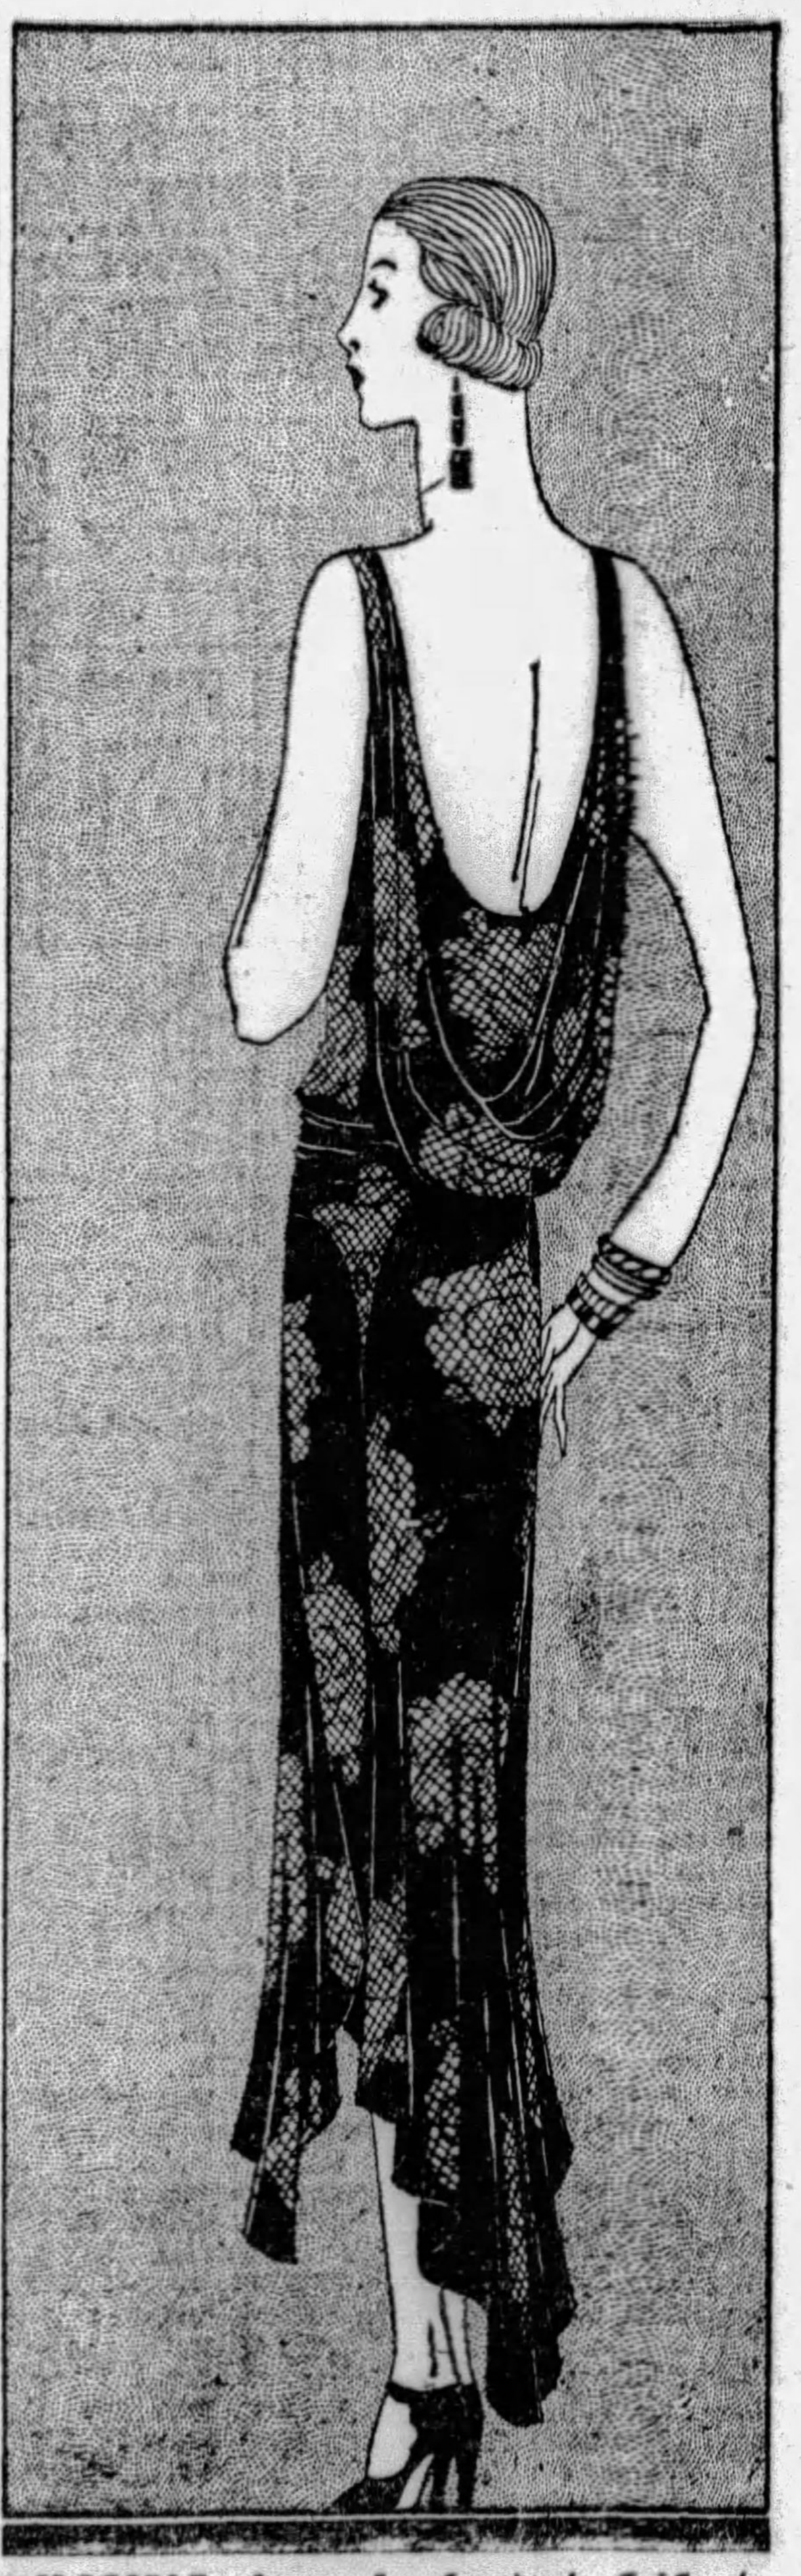
Nothing doing, in these modern days! The modern Mother is the friend and pal of her family. If they go on a swimming party, Mother's right on the job and trots along, and is the life of the party. She drives the car with infant Danghter or Son as the case may be, gleefully reposing on her lap. And when it comes to tennis or golf—well, try and get the modern mother to stay home!

And frankly, I'm for her! Isn't it better to have a Mother who speaks your language and plays your games, to one who would and probably did think you were crazy when you talked about the enjoyments of your set? Aren't you a better girl and boy having such a mother? What a thrill you get when someone says "Your MOTHER! I thought she was your Big Sister!"

But she's none the less a really, truly Mother, for all her proclivities. She's the same kind of a Mother that has blessed the world ever since it began, only she's modern. And she's healthier and happier for it, and so are you—and the world's a better place for her being in it—and Love's delighted.

DESIGNS DIRECT FROM THE ATELIERS REVEAL COMING SEASON'S NEW MODES

Sketched in Paris



EXAMPLE of new floral printed chiffon for formal evenings. Rose design on black background. The model has not yet been seen outside the Paris atelier where it has just been designed.

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Roses in December will be seen everywhere next season, for the latest frocks designed for winter evening wear show an overwhelming number of floral printed chiffons and voiles.

So we see the age of reason in fashions that refuse to be bound by season, clime or place. If the style is right and becoming, it is continued so long as there is a demand for it.

The regal note continues to be sustained by the Princess line, which is a feature of the newest frocks, and is finding much favor with designers and clients alike. It is a gracious line, that combines dignity with a pleasing simplicity of cut and silhouette. The fussy type of dress, with frills and fluttery points, is "out," for the present, anyway.

THE illustrations for today depict two of the very newest models, which were created for formal wear but are still reposing in the quiet security of the atelier.

THERE are many that like the faille for both day and evening wear, and so we have had sketched an evening model of that fabric in plum color. It is on close-fitting Princess lines, with a deep "V"-shaped decolletage at the back.

(Copyright, 1929, King Features Syn., Inc.)

Household Hints

If a piece of dyed cloth is damped and rubbed on clean white paper, the absence of any stain shows that the dye is a "fast" color.

Bread boxes lined with brown paper will remain sweet in hot, damp weather.

A tablespoonful of milk in which a little brown sugar has been dissolved will glaze cakes and pastry.

To make brooms fresh and clean, dip into a pail of boiling soap and water and dry in the sun.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

A Youthful Hostess

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I want to give a party to about 16 of my girl friends. I am 17 years of age and I have never had many opportunities to entertain.

Will you please tell me how I shall word my invitations? Should my mother's name be on the card?

I have a sister 15. Should her name be on the card with mine? I want to have cards. Please tell me if I should write "Bridge" or "Cards" on the invitation. G. S.

FOR a girl of your age, it would be in excellent form to send an invitation written on your own letter paper. Why not send your invitations in this form instead of the more formal manner of visiting cards. One of the great advantages of the form that I am recommending is that you can so graciously write the invitations in the name of your mother as well as your name. Wouldn't you like this? This would be in good taste.

"Dear Mary:

"Mother and I would be so happy if you will come to a party that we are giving on Wednesday evening, August the fifth. We are inviting several of my best friends—and it won't be a party without you. The party is at our home, at 8 o'clock, and is to be very informal. Come prepared to play bridge, if you wish, or to dance, if you wish.

"Dearest wishes from mother and Janet and me, and high anticipations of seeing you on the fifth.

"Most devotedly yours,

IF you decide that you still wish to send a card it will be either your visiting card or one of your semi-engraved cards, but this kind of invitation seems a bit sophisticated for a girl of your age. On either one it would be best form for you to include your mother's name, but it would not be necessary to include your sister's name, unless she is to be co-hostess. If you are going to play bridge, then I should write that word on the cards; if you plan on several games of cards, then indicate this by writing 'cards.'"

The Married Woman's Signature

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I frequently wish to sign my given name, married name and maiden name. Will you please tell me the correct way?

MRS. ——.

DO YOU mean your informal name? It is the custom usually now for a woman to adopt as her informal married name the first and last names of her maiden name prefixed to the last name of her married name: Mary Allen Browne. Or she may prefer to drop the last name of her maiden name and call herself Mary Browne. Either form she would, say, use for the signature of her checks. Too, this is the correct direct signature to letters that she writes to people whom she does not know very well but still who do not need to be told her formal married name. For her business letters and for letters that she writes to people who need to be told her married name this is the correct form—and how I wish that every married woman would pay attention to this, for it is so important for her to know it:

Very truly yours,
Mary Allen Browne

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Child's Tender Skin Demands Daily Care

WATER is your friend. It should be your baby's friend and will be, if you will help a little.

Cleanliness is essential to health. The cleaner your baby is, the better tempered it will be; the less it will cry; the better it will look; the better it will be in every respect!

In hot weather the mother of an infant has no easy task. She has a full-sized job. Fortunately, it is a satisfactory job in the long run, worth all the trouble and anxiety.

The baby must be changed often. Every time this is done, there must be local bathing, thorough drying and the application of powder. Without perfect cleansing, the skin becomes irritated, chafed or chapped. This causes pain—real discomfort. In consequence, the poor little youngster cries and makes everybody unhappy. The experienced mother will understand. The new mother may not know. That is why I speak about it.

The skin of an infant is extremely thin and sensitive. It must be treated more considerately than the veneer of a $3,000 piano.

It is surprising what a difference there is in soaps. A variety that agrees with one adult may produce uncomfortable skin symptoms to another. A variety that agrees with all adults may be extremely irritating to a baby. You must select the soap with care. When you find a kind that agrees, stick to it. To avoid irritation of the infant's skin is a thing vital to its welfare.

It is a lot of trouble to prepare for that thorough bath every day. On a particularly hot day there is a temptation to omit it. This must not be done.

The cleansing of the whole body is necessary in order that the skin may be in prime condition to do its work. The more work the skin does, the less burden there will be to be carried by the kidneys. Good health is promoted by activity of the skin. Health is impaired unless the skin is kept clean.

Plenty of water for bathing and plenty of water to drink. These are well worthwhile hints for baby's care in hot weather.

Answers to Health Queries

C. W. H. Q.—How can freckles be removed?

A.—Low vitality, dizziness, depressed spirits and headache are among the outstanding symptoms. Some infection is at the source, as a general rule. The treatment depends upon the cause.

2. Poor circulation is the usual cause. Improve the general health and the circulation will improve. Massage and application of heat should give increased comfort meanwhile.

WORRIED. Q.—What causes a murmuring heart and is this condition dangerous? I have been told to avoid work and to rest as much as possible. Would smoking or drinking tend to aggravate the trouble?

A.—Nervousness or some abnormality of the heart itself would be apt to cause this symptom. Whether or not it is dangerous depends upon the extent of the trouble. Undue excitement and overexertion, as well as excesses in eating and drinking, would naturally tend to cause further trouble. Follow your doctor's advice.

Otero's Girl Warns Him Of the Grave Danger Of Following Rico

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In the back room of the "Club Palermo," Chicago gangland headquarters, fat and swarthy Sam Vettori, gangster chief, outlines the plan for a hold-up of the Casa Alvarado, high-class night club. Tony Passa, Otero the Greek, Joe Massara and Rico, Sam's lieutenant, are each assigned parts to carry out. Sam, who does not actively participate, warns Rico there is to be no shooting.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER II.

VETTORI was sitting in his little office on the main floor. On the other side of the wall the jazz band was playing, but he paid no attention. The noise of the jazz band was the same to him as the ticking of a clock to an ordinary person. He felt very pleasant and comfortable over his bottle of wine and his plate of spaghetti. Things were right!

He congratulated himself on his subordinates. Each man a specialist. Yes, yes! That was the way to do. None of this hit or miss stuff for Sam Vettori. Rico the best gunman in Little Italy; a swelled head, all right, but he can be handled, and there you are! Otero so crazy about Rico he "don't know nothing." Following Rico any place; do anything Rico tell him. And handy with a rod. Well, well. Not bad for a Mexican. As a rule foreigners were not right with Sam Vettori, but in general he had an open mind, and Otero was the goods. And look at Joe Massara, there was a man for you! A swell Italian who could pass anywhere. One winter in Florida, so they say, Joe passed himself off as a count and hooked a rich widow for plenty. Yes, yes! That was Joe for you. As an inside man you couldn't beat him. And Tony! He could drive a car 60 miles an hour straight up the Tribune Tower. Only one thing, sometimes Tony was undependable. Used to be a choir boy at St. Dominick's and that stuff. But he had outgrown that, maybe; anyway he was dead scared of Rico and that would shut his mouth.

Vettori leaned back, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand and unbottoned his vest. Spaghetti and wine, what is better!

Vettori looked up.

"Yeah? Know them?"

"Never seen them before."

Vettori heaved himself to his feet and walked with Carillo to the swinging doors which separated the backrooms and kitchen from the club proper. He pushed the door open about a foot and peered in. Carillo pointed.

Vettori laughed and closed the door.

"Some of them dumb Irish," he said; "let 'em alone unless they get bad and start something, then bounce 'em."

'O. K., boss,'' said Carillo.

Waiters passed Vettori in the corridor, sweat dropping from their faces, steam rising from the dishes on the slanted trays. Vettori rubbed his hands.

"Business is good. Well, well! We won't none of us die in the poorhouse."

When he got back to his office he found Scabby, the informer, waiting for him. Scabby was dark and undersized with a heavy, sullen, blotched face. Passing as a police informer, he was in reality a member of the Vettori gang. He played a dangerous game as he informed on other gangs. His life wasn't worth a cent and he was jumpy and quick with a gun.

"Well, well, Giovanni," said Vettori, "what's the news?"

Vettori called a waiter.

"Some spaghetti for this man here," he said, "and a bottle of wine."

"That's the ticket," said Scabby without smiling; he never smiled; his face was melancholy and lined, and sagged like a hound's. "The boys on?"

"All set," said Vettori. "It looks easy."

Scabby nodded.

"It ought to be. But no gunplay, get that, Sam. The Big Boy'd raise hell if he knew what was up."

Vettori's face hardened.

"I heard that once, Scabby. That's enough. This is too good to pass up."

"All right," said Scabby, "I've had my say. But things ain't what they used to be, Sam. It's getting dangerous. They've even got the Big Boy scared. It's the damn newspapers. They play that crime stuff off the boards. Big headlines, see? That's the trouble."

They sat silent. Vettori, absorbed, puffed on his stogie. Finally he said:

"Listen, Scabby, you ain't heard nothing, see? I got to keep these boys on their toes. Especially Joe. Don't spill nothing about the Big Boy."

"Reilly, the dick's, up front."

Vettori nodded.

"He's O. K. If he sticks around, send him back in about half an hour."

"Yeah," said Seal Skin.

"Where I used to be it never snowed."

"Didn't it?"

"How come you ever left Mexico, Ramon?"

"Well, I don't know." Otero scratched his head. "I just left."

"Was they after you?"

Seal Skin gave him a push.

"Look," said Seal Skin, "you're a good guy, Ramon. But dumb. How come you hang after Rico?"

Otero didn't understand.

"What you say?"

Otero shook his head.

"No, they'll never get Rico."

"They get 'em all."

"No," said Otero, "they'll never get Rico. Once I say to him, 'Look, you must be careful.' But he say, 'Not me, they'll never get Rico.'"

Seal Skin opened the window and flung her cigar down into the street. A gust of cold air rushed into the overheated room.

"Listen," she said, "that's bunk. Rico's no different from anybody else. You stick with Rico long enough and you'll have a swell funeral. Why don't you get into the beer racket? That's safe."

"I go with Rico," said Otero. "What do I care? I have no people. Once I had a brother but they shot him."

"The cops?"

"No, the rurales. He was with Villa."

"Who was Villa?"

"Villa was a great man, like Rico."

"Let's go, Ramon."

"Sure, sure," said Otero.

Neal Humiliates Ann Marie After She Forgives Him For His Conduct

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Unlike her bold and modern flapper sisters, Jeanne and Alice, Ann Marie Macy refuses to compromise her high ideals by petting. Ann Marie has more serious ideas. She saves the money she earns in her father's bookstore to study art. When John Lawler, catch-of-the-town, invites her to the Christmas dance, her happiness is short lived as Alice selfishly requests Ann Marie to stay home while she attends the party in her place. Alice and Jeanne further infuriate Ann Marie by pilfering her Christmas bottle of rare perfume. When Florence Lawler brings her visiting cousin, Neal Forsythe, and his friend, Jim Goodwin, to the Macy store, Ann Marie secretly falls in love with the fickle Neal. It is the more serious Goodwin, however, who is enamored of Ann Marie. He leaves the dance to visit her in the bookstore. Ann Marie belatedly attends the dance at his suggestion. She really wants to see the handsome Neal Forsythe. In the cloak room, she discovers Neal embracing Leota Ingram, notorious town character.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE light from the hall fell on the pair, startling them.

Instantly they sprang apart, and Neal Forsythe fairly jumped as he saw Ann Marie standing in the doorway.

"G-good lord!" he stammered, and started toward her.

But the door was closed in his face, and by the time he got it open again Ann Marie was halfway down the narrow hall.

He caught her just as she reached the top of the stairs, and swung her around so that she faced him.

"Look here—let me explain!" he begged in a thick, unsteady voice. Looking at him, Ann Marie saw that his deep-set gray eyes were bloodshot and that his face was flushed. Alcohol was on his breath.

"I've had about six cocktails too many—but I've still sense enough to know that I'm drunk," he said, and laughed. "You don't know anything about me—so I'm going to tell you this: I'm not the kind of fellow who goes around kissing maids."

He laughed again as if his explanation were some kind of a joke. "Really—I'm telling you the truth," he added, "want to know why?"

Ann Marie shook her head. She felt as if she were going to cry—cry about this man whom she had seen twice in her life!—Why, what was he to her, anyway? She was a fool to think about him or to care what he did!—A man who would kiss a maid in a country club dressing room!

"I don't want to know anything about you! I know enough as it is!" she said, and wrenched herself away from him.

Jim Goodwin was standing in the lower hall, patiently waiting for her.

Beyond, in the ball room, the jazz band was playing "Doin' the Raccoon," and everybody was dancing.

Ann Marie caught a flying glimpse of Alice fox-trotting past in Johnny Lawler's arms. Then Florence and Howdy came dancing out into the hall. Florence was in white and she looked like a fat, good-natured baby.

"Hello!" she sang out at them. "Awfully glad that you came after all, Ann Marie!—Howdy and I are just going out to the sun porch. Come on along—the punch bowl's out there, and somebody has put a swell stick in it!—So Little Flossie's goin' to have a dwink!" She always lapsed into baby talk when she had had something to drink.

Everybody seemed to have had something to drink that night. . . .One or two couples that swung past Ann Marie and Jim Goodwin were a bit unsteady on their feet, and everybody was too noisy and too full of laughter.

There were bunches of mistletoe tied on all the lights with big bows of red satin ribbon, and it seemed to Ann Marie that everybody was kissing everybody else.

"None of the older people come to these Christmas parties," she said to Jim Goodwin, "and they're always the wildest ones of the year. Last year on New Year's Eve—" And so she went on talking to him, telling him all about the gay times in a small town, trying to be cheerful and entertaining.

And when she saw Neal Forsythe, standing in the wide doorway watching her with his bloodshot eyes, she began to talk twice as fast as before—and to laugh twice as much.

She wasn't going to let him see that it made any difference to her that he had kissed Leota Ingram! She was going to show him that he was nothing to her but a man whom she scarcely knew and certainly cared nothing about!

And so she did not even look his way when the dance was over and she and Jim Goodwin were walking out of the room with the rest of the noisy happy crowd.

But suddenly she felt someone touch her arm, and before she turned she knew that it would be Neal Forsythe standing there beside her. . . It was.

He was so close to her that his dark smooth face almost touched hers as she looked up at him. Flushed with drink and with his handsome eyes inflamed, he still was the best-looking man she ever had seen—and, beauty-lover that she was, Ann Marie would have been thrilled by his nearness even if she had not been in love with him.

It was thrilling, too, to feel his hand gripping her bare arm as he drew her still closer to him and away from Jim Goodwin.

"Sorry, Jim," he said to his friend, "but I'd like to speak to Miss—Miss—" He stopped, trying to remember her name.

"Must see you alone," Neal Forsythe said, and his voice was still thick. "Any place around here where we can be alone?"

Ann Marie shook her head and gave a sharp little laugh. "No place but the backstairs!" she answered bitterly.

He pretended that he did not hear what she said.

"Let's go and sit in old Jim's car," he suggested, and hating herself for going with him, Ann Marie went.

A high wind had come up, and rain was pelting down on the stone terrace outside the clubhouse.

"We'll have to run for it," Neal said, holding his coat collar tight around his neck with one hand. With the other he swung Ann Marie down upon the soft, wet ground below the terrace. She could feel her thin slippers sink into the earth when she landed upon it.

It was warm and cozy in Jim Goodwin's car. They climbed into the back seat and Neal tucked Jim's soft fur rug around them.

"Now we can talk," Ann Marie said when they were settled.

Neal laughed. "First, I'm going to celebrate," he answered. "Just to show you how glad I am that we're here together, I'm goin' to have a little snifter."

There was a gleam of silver in the darkness as he took a liquor flask from his pocket and unscrewed the cap.

"Here—you, first," he said, and held it to Ann Marie's lips.

She pushed it away from her. "No—I hate it! It smells so nasty!" she declared. "Please don't touch it! Please put it away!—I'm no Puritan, but you've had too much now. You told me so yourself a while ago."

He put the flask away.

"There's not another girl in the world that I'd do that for," he told her solemnly. "You think that's funny, don't you? Because I hardly know you but—listen—"

He groped for her hands in the darkness, and when he found them and held them Ann Marie did not try to draw away.

"Listen," he said again, "I fell in love with you—just crazy in love with you—when I saw you this afternoon. Been thinking about the way you look ever since." His hands went up, closed on either side of her face stroking the soft skin.

Ann Marie tried to draw away from him into her own corner of the back seat . . . This was what he had done, no doubt, to Leota Ingram at the head of the kitchen stairs in the clubhouse not more than a half hour before!

"I've never felt this way about a girl before," he was saying. "I've been pretty far gone, but never like this—" He seemed to be talking more to himself than to her.

Ann Marie did not want to believe him, and yet she wished that she could. . . Wouldn't it be wonderful if the same miracle that had happened to her had happened to him?—If he had fallen in love with her at first sight as she had fallen in love with him that afternoon? Sometimes things like that did happen. . .The love-story magazines were full of just such miracles.

"Lovely little girl," he murmured, and his hands dropped from her face. They closed over her shoulders as he pulled her close to him.

"No—you can't kiss Leota Ingram and then kiss me—" Ann Marie never finished the sentence. His lips went over her face, found her lips, and closed over them.

His arms crushed her closer and closer, and filled with the deepest shame and the greatest happiness she ever had known, Ann Marie closed her eyes and gave him kiss for kiss.

"He does love me," she thought vaguely, "and, even if he's bad, I love him. I can't help it."

And so the affair between them started.

The rain was coming down in sheets when they got out of the car a minute or two later.

"I can't go back in all this!" Ann Marie cried and stepped back into the tonneau almost as soon as her foot touched the ground. "We'll have to drive around to the porch—I'd look like a drowned rat if I ran across the lawn, wouldn't I?"

But when they tried to start the engine they found that Jim had locked the switch.

"Never mind, I'll go and get his key," Neal decided. He jumped out and vanished into the streaming darkness.

Ann Marie sat still and waited.

Five minutes went by. Ten . . .fifteen. . .She climbed into the back seat once more and wrapped herself up in the soft fur rug.

Through the rain and darkness she could see the lighted windows of the clubhouse. . . What was Neal doing there so long? Surely it wasn't taking him all this time to find Jim Goodwin and ask him for his key.

After an hour's long wait, she made up her mind to go back to the club, although she knew she would ruin her one and only pair of satin slippers in the dash through mud and wet grass.

Holding the fur robe around her, she stepped out into the night. . .She was soaked and breathless when she reached the porch.

She stood still for a moment, peering through the long French windows of the ballroom. The band was playing and the smooth floor was crowded with dancers. . . They all looked a little tired now. The "stick" in the punch had pepped them all up at first, and now they were letting down. Getting dull and sleepy.

Jeanie and Brooke Walters danced past the window that was nearest to Ann Marie. Cheek to cheek they were, and their eyes were almost closed. They looked like a couple of sleep-walkers or worn-out marathon dancers.

Then Ann Marie glimpsed the flash of Alice's white satin dress and the silver-gilt of her hair. . . She was dancing with a man whose sleek black head was close to hers. Whose body was pressed so closely to hers that their two figures moved as one. . .She was dancing with Neal Forsythe!

"Why, he's forgotten all about me!" thought Ann Marie. And all alone in the cold and rain, she made a hurt and angry little sound that was like the whimper of a child.

BUGS BAER Says

WHAT FORE?

GOLF is an important game—even outdoors.

"Bugs" Baer

However, it has taken its place among our national deficits.

The national amateur championships will be held at Del Monte next month. There will be crowds watching the golfers indorsing their favorite cigarets.

It is to these crowds we wish to speak. A golf crowd is known as a gallery. It follows the golfers from tee to tee, paying for the best and hoping for the worst.

Now gallery, you should have rules just the same as members but not quite so expensive.

First of all you should be scenery and not heard.

When an indignant player breaks his club, don't laugh in his face. We have bunkers for the purpose.

Don't fidget while a player is putting. Even Rockefeller Institute concedes that fidgets are contagious.

The clicking of dollar cameras is a very enjoyable sound to a player about to toss off a two-foot put. If you haven't got a camera, you can imitate the noise with your teeth.

Any player can drive out of a six-foot circle. It requires only 200 galleryites to hem in a golfer so that he cannot even scratch his back with a niblick shaped like Harry Lauder's cane.

So try to make your favorite golfer feel at home in a match. Be clubby. Pal around with him on the fairways. Let him know that you are with him body and soul and asthma.

You have paid your five Andy Mellon certificates to see the contest and $5 ain't hay.

If golfers can check up the number of strokes they smack the pillets then a galleryite is entitled to count the number of strokes he made them miss.

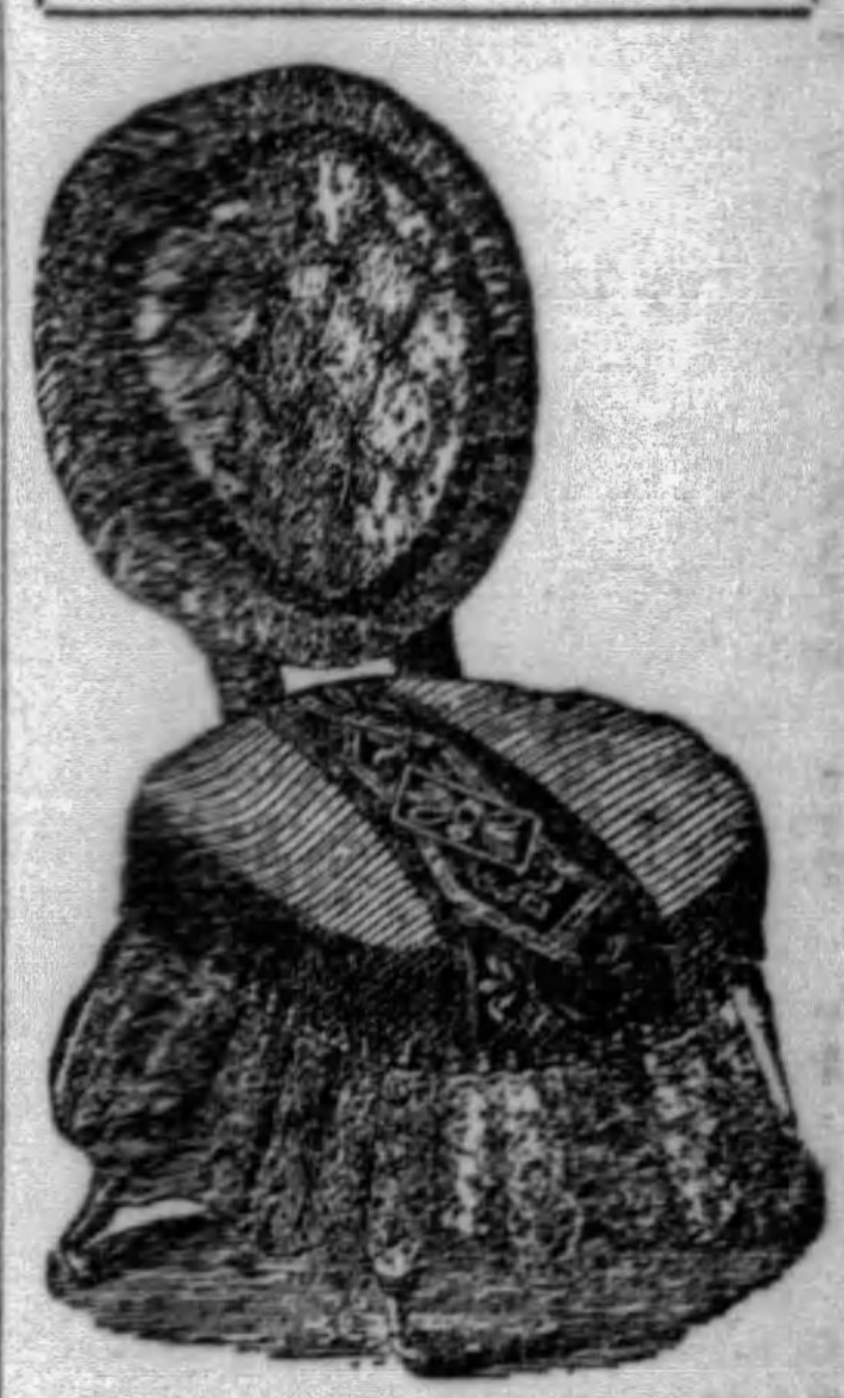
AUNT BELLA'S DAILY CHAT FOR SHUT-INS



"The birthday gift," said Aunt Bella, in her annual radio message, "should always reflect the giver's personality. When anyone insists on buying a gift for Aunt Bella, she suggests a chair. For, after all, what is home without a chair? At this moment I have my heart set on the chair above, which was designed by a gentleman friend of mine, whose name I cannot divulge at the moment. But the back conceals a radio loud speaker, while the hinged seat, when lifted, contains a mirror. I am crazy to have one as a gift from my Shut-Ins, to whom I talk over the radio twice weekly gratis."

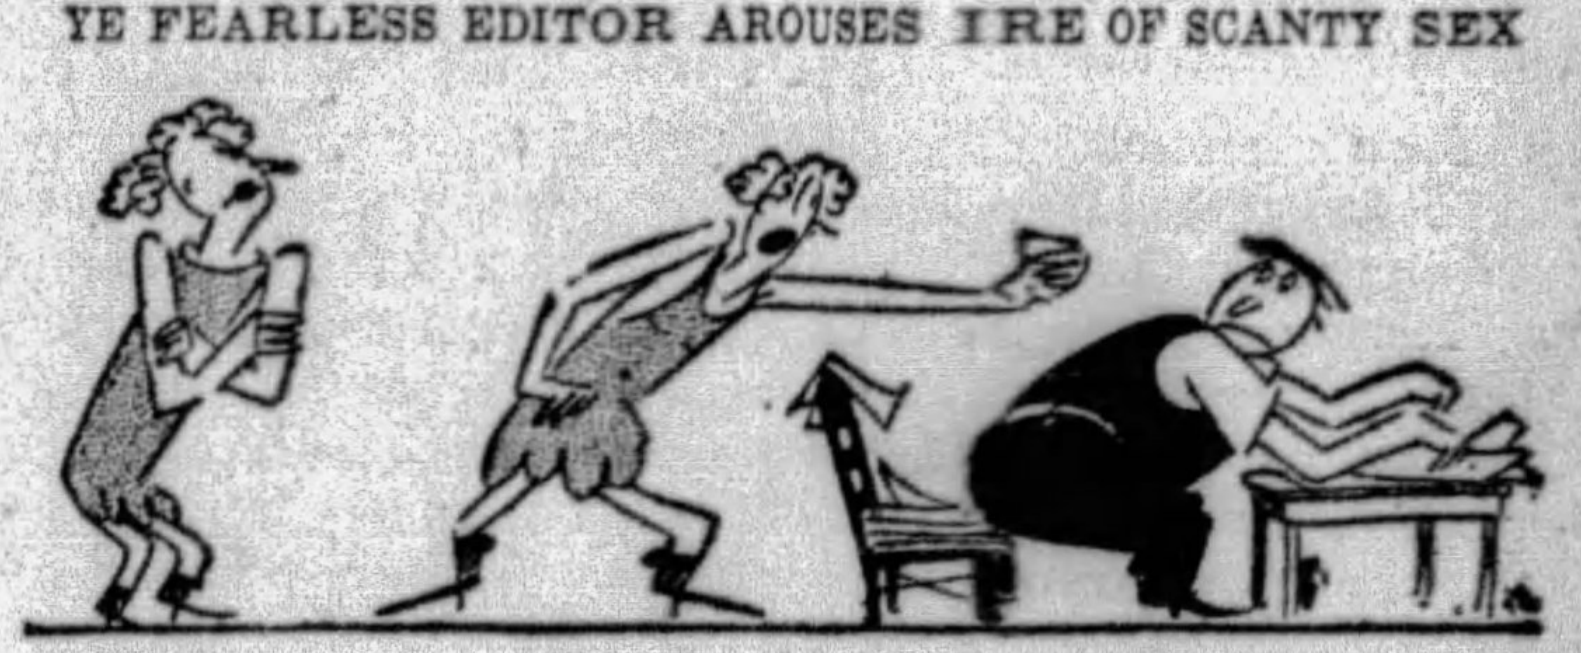
YE FEARLESS EDITOR AROUSES IRE OF SCANTY SEX



(Letter to the Editor of the Paris, Missouri, Mercury)

Dear Sir:

We (a bunch of girls) want to thank you for the very close attention that you bestow upon us. We may not be overburdened with clothes, but we certainly are thankful that we don't have to wear skirts that drag the ground, catching all the dirt that they can gather. If our parents are not objecting, why should you? People are tired of reading this stuff that you write about us. Young people of today couldn't possibly be any worse than you were. We aren't trying to tell you how to write your paper, but we think that you talk too much about your town girls. We think that this saying is true: An old fool is the biggest fool. We only wish that you had a girl of your own so that we might use her as a model.

Yours Truly,
Members of the scanty sex.

A Fair Question

What IS the Federal Reserve?

Brokers' loans go to $6,000,000,000. The Federal Reserve raises its rediscount rate to 6 per cent, and American business men pay from 7 to 15 per cent for money. In France money costs 4 per cent.

President Hoover, responsible for general conditions, might ask the Reserve Board this question:

Do you manage the Federal Reserve as an adjunct of Wall Street stock speculation, or as a national organization to stabilize credit and help business?

At present the Federal Reserve might as well sit in a Broad street broker's office, with a ticker at each member's elbow.

Someone should tell the Federal Reserve that stock speculation is not the ONLY business in this country, Squeezing speculators worries them little. They expect to make 100 per cent a month, and do not worry about 12 per cent a year.

But 12 per cent a year keeps capital out of industry and out of real estate.

Why should a capitalist invest money in factories and employment for workers and then worry to make the enterprise pay 8 or 10 per cent, when he can lend his money on call for 12 per cent and get it any day he wants it?

Someone is responsible for putting this country on a basis of usury. And Congress ought to know or find out who it is.

A Notable Dinner

Mouths With No Silver Spoons.

Everybody, well informed, knows them all.

Edison represents general electrical science, Ford represents the conquest of the law of gravitation, which used to tie men to one spot; Glenn Curtiss and Orville Wright represent flying; Rosenwald represents scientific distribution; Eastman photography; one of the most important sciences, especially important in education. Firestone represents rubber tires. Young gentlemen who wonder why they were not born with a silver spoon in their mouths will please remember that every one of these men started WITH NOTHING. What they have they got by working.

Lovely Woman

When She Stoops to Speculation.

Brokers are opening offices especially for women, where ladies may do their little speculating, annoy the Federal Reserve Board by increasing brokers' loans, and smoke a cigaret undisturbed by men.

When stocks are going up, lady speculators walk into brokers' offices for men quite gaily. When stocks are going down they don't like men to see their worried expression. Hence the broker's office for ladies only.

Cod Liver Oil

Reinstated, but the Smell Lingers On.

There was a time when everybody guzzled cod liver oil. Just why, they didn't quite know. Finally the physicians began yawning and announced that it was a silly and futile fad. The stuff tasted bad, and probably didn't do any good. Science, however, has reconsidered. Cod liver oil is being prescribed right and left. It teems with vitamins, they say, and is advocated, along with sunshine, to promote growth and bone formations. So cod liver oil is reinstated, with apologies. But the stuff smells just as eloquent as it ever did.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I WAS lost in the woods the other day. For hours I wandered about aimlessly, growing more and more apprehensive as the shadows gathered. It is not good medicine to be lost in the High Sierra.

Suddenly I came upon a "blaze." It wasn't much—a faint, chipped mark which someone had made on a pine tree years ago—but to me it was a god send. For beyond, on a larger pine, I could see another blaze—and still another. Groping my way from mark to mark I found the trail again and presently was safe in the clear.

With my relief came thought—

Thought of the man who made those blazes long ago.

That man must have been dead many years. I do not know how he looked, nor how he felt. I suppose he felt about himself pretty much as I feel about myself. I suppose he was full of plans about getting ahead and putting himself on record. His personal likes and dislikes must have seemed as important to him as mine do to me. He must have been full of conflicts and desires, rebellions and ambitions.

In short, he was a PERSON. And the thought of his own PERSONALITY meant more to that man than anything else on earth.

That blaze which he made certainly didn't seem very important to him. It was only a tiresome detail of his day's work. He had planned much larger achievements for himself.

YET OF ALL THAT PLANNING AND DOING, OF ALL HIS FUSSING AND FRETTING, ONLY THE BLAZE REMAINS.

Queer thought, that—queer as applied to you and me, with our excitement over ourselves.

We, too, have great plans for ourselves. We, too, believe that the development of our own personalities is the most important thing on earth. We, too, resent the tiresome daily chores that interrupt that development—

AND YET, WHEN THE STORY IS TOLD, THE "BLAZE" WE MADE IN THAT COMMON ROUND OF CHORES IS THE ONLY THING THAT COUNTS.

Our vanity and our desire, our fury and delight, they pass with the wind and men forget them. But men do not forget the blaze we made in the human record—the mark we established for courage and honesty, kindness and fairness—

THOSE MARKS ENDURE.

And by them, men grope their way through the shadows of savagery into the bright clearing of civilization.

Get as much fun as you can out of life, and as much excitement out of yourself. Develop yourself as much as you can for, who knows what comes after? But do not disdain the small details of life. They are as important as anything you ever will do—they hold your record as surely as your most spectacular achievement. They are YOUR BLAZE.

Bible Passages

Healed by the Name of Jesus

(The Acts 4; 1-12)

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them.

Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

And Annas, the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

This is the stone which was set at nought of the builders, which is become the head of the corner.

Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Because I Loved You

BECAUSE I loved you once,
Dear One,
Sometimes the dullest hour
Will glow with the past April's sun.
Will bloom with that far flower.

And when across the drab today.
This golden veil is drawn,
The love of that lost yesterday
Must still, I know, live on.

Because I loved you once, my
Dear,
The world will always be
A fairer place, the sky more clear,
More magic on the sea.

It is a debt I can not pay
Through all the coming years,
That love, whose memory takes away
The bitterness of tears.

Although our eyes may never meet
With rapture, as before,
Because I loved you once, my Sweet,
I love all life the more.

WITHOUT AN ALIBI

By Herbert Kaufman

THEORY, the Attic* philosopher, STILL clings to the obsession that want and despair are the mainsprings of crime—an analysis descended from obsolete authorities, by way of pre-revolutionary France, medieval England and other oppressive phases of European civilization.

Wherever men do not equally share the rights of opportunity and education, necessity will provoke unlawful trades and drive them to prey upon discriminatory systems.

Masses, born in the tradition of inferiority, mire-bred, mentally and morally dulled by environment, logically produce bandits, burglars, petty thieves—and brutes.

The earlier political economists, considering poverty from cause to effect, were therefore certain that jails would decrease with the spread of schools, and violence diminish as democracy adjusted social inequalities.

But recent experience is compelled to REJECT their conclusions.

For instance, there are NO fixed inequalities in America. We are all free to elect and follow preferred bents.

THE same chances are open to every citizen, and constant example assures ambition that neither origin nor background can lastingly thwart or short-change ability.

The spawn of drudges and dullards hold as many positions of authority and posts of distinction in these United States as the throw of scholarship and aristocracy.

Washington was hall-marked with caste, but Lincoln eternalizes Constitutional pledges that snobbery may never debar worth from a deserved office.

The foundation of the Lefcourt Building is a boy's newsstand, and Louis Bamberger's gift of a million dollars to his employes reminds the country that its merchant princes still climb from the lowest lader rungs.

Nothing that THEY accomplished was or is beyond common reach.

And thousands of like careers give the lie to any crook who offers the alibi that he never stood a show to win as FAIRLY.

AT least half the inmates of overcrowded prisons and penitentiaries are behind bars because they're too blamed lazy and dissolute to go straight.

The majority of our criminals at least passed through the grade school, came from respectable, industrious families and deliberately CHOSE to go wrong.

They ELECTED to be gangsters and rowdies and grafters. Their cheap, wilful minds always despised thrift, earnestness and legal restraint.

They prowl, pander and slay by inclination and calculation.

Granted that fifty per cent of our felons are fit subjects for psychiatry, just as many are simply objects of contempt.

And if mawkish sentimentality or empirical guff protest this particular viewpoint, let them explain how five reasoning beings could bring themselves to shoot down a Westchester innkeeper, hold up, confiscate and smash three successive automobiles, maintain a pistol battle with pursuing police, and risk life imprisonment as chronic offenders (not to mention the electric chair), MERELY BECAUSE THEY CONSIDERED THE RESTAURANT'S CHARGES TOO HIGH.

THE MEANING OF SCIENCE

By Archibald Henderson

IT IS sometimes said that it is the tendency of the present age to make a religion of science. Agnostics and atheists exalt science to the skies, because it delivers the goods. Science gives useful and valuable answers to our questions. It meets the issue and faces the facts. It tells us what we want to know. It is exalted into a form of religion because, in a certain definite sense, it answers our prayers.

In his "Old Faith and New," Strauss made the attempt to present the scientific attitude as food for the religious consciousness. "Herbert Spencer's attitude towards the Unknowable," says Havelock Ellis, "is a distinct though faint approximation to the religious relationship. Positivism, with its quasi-scientific notons, was founded on a curiously narrow conception of the nature of religion, and its religious sterility is probably inevitable. The man of science has little to do with magnificent generalizations; he is concerned chiefly with the patient investigation of details; it is but rarely that he feels called upon, like Kepler or Newton, for any emotional response to the grandeur and uniformity of law. Yet to many this vision of universal law has come as a light moving over chaos, a glad new discovery of the vastness and yet the homeliness of the world."

Science wins the respect and admiration of mankind for the sincerity and selflessness of its votaries. The scientific worker does not try to drive a hard bargain with Nature, to "Jew it down," to get something for nothing. In science, there is no royal road to learning. You cannot "get rich quick" along the paths laid out by science. Its Pantheon contains no statues or monuments to "get rich quick Wallingfords." The scientist works in the sweat of his brow, the excitation of his brain; and counts the cost of achieving results in terms of neither money nor labor.

In speaking of some of the great scientists of the past, Tyndall once asked: "What was the motive that spurred them on? What urged them to those battles and those victories over reticent Nature, which have become the heritage of the human race? It is never to be forgotten that not one of those great investigators, from Aristotle down to Stokes and Kirchhoff, had any practical end in view, according to the ordinary definition of the word 'practical.' They did not propose to themselves money as an end, and knowledge as a means of obtaining it. For the most part, they nobly reversed this process, made knowledge their end, and such money as they possessed the means of obtaining it."

Science, however, does offer rich and ample rewards to its votaries. Many a discovery can be turned to practical ends for the human race. Mankind will pay any price for safety, convenience, comfort, and health, whether it be in the purchase of safety pins, radio sets, or insulin.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

THERE was a fellow that was famous for hiking. He was out in all weather, walking miles and miles every Saturday and Sunday.

One day he was knocked cuckoo by a train. He had been walking on the railroad track.

"Why did you walk in the middle of the railroad track?" says the coroner.

"The grade was too steep to walk along the side. The middle was pretty good."

"Yes, but why did you walk along railroad tracks at all?"

Isn't It So?

Radio Educating Chinese

It Won't Work.

Russia pays for the radio sets, pays the broadcasters that talk Chinese, and invite Chinese "to arise and throw off their chains" and apply the teachings of Karl Marx.

The broadcasting probably amuses the simple Chinese, and they are willing to be amused.

But those Chinese have been raised on Shintoism, or Confucianism. In either case they are not conscious of having any chains to throw off.

What they want is a chance to work, produce what they need to eat, and then EAT it, minus what they have to give to the owner of the land or factory.

The Chinese worker does not WANT Communism, and he cannot understand what the solemn Karl Marx was talking about with his proletariat and his Kapitalismus.

It is as though some prosperous gentleman paid for a radio, and hired Prof. Einstein to broadcast his relativity theory in the Congo.

The natives would enjoy the sound, but they would not be interested in argument about space, limited or unlimited, about the reality of motion or its unreality, or the "proof" that nothing really moves at all.

Even the average Russian would rather have a good glass of vodka, a good song and a good dance, in his high boots, than all that Karl Marx ever wrote.

You must temper the wind to the shorn lamb.

You must temper the political argument to the shorn intellect.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Otto Kahn is the amusement world's most celebrated Butter and Egg Man—the "angel" par excellence. His generosity toward the opera as well as the struggling little alley theaters, has cost him more thousands than even his heavy publicity records.

Mr. Kahn's bulging purse strings seem never tightened for any new experimentation in art, literature and the drama. He is the chronic good fellow so far as they are concerned, but those who know say he is extremely penny wise in expenditures of a personal sort.

He backed his talented son, Roger Wolfe, in several night club, theatrical and jazz band endeavors, and for those looming up in the red on the ledger he holds air tight notes which must be paid just the same as any other loans to individuals.

About the only recent so-called artistic movement around New York in which he did not play a part was the Hoboken renaissance. This was due to the fact that The Groping for Better Things across the river clicked from the start, before the recent debacle left it high and dry—mostly dry.

It is said the financier was genuinely sorry. He would have liked to have been identified with the Seacoast of Bohemia because of a sentimentality. It was at Meyers Hotel—infused with new life before its recent padlocking—that Mr. Kahn ate his first meal upon arriving in America, years ago.

Mr. Kahn is the cosmopolite and wealthy man about town of the glamorous novel. He generally arrives at the theater in the middle of the first act, where his silver hair and expansive white shirt front add luster to first nights. He often attends three openings in an evening.

There are a half dozen secretaries whose jobs are to sort out worthy request mail, have it investigated and after much microscopic scrutiny, if any, proves to be of real importance, filters on to Mr. Kahn. O, yes, as a democratic gesture now and then he rides in the subway.

The sudden rise and the equally sudden fading of the young corn-fed opera star, Marion Talley, did not prove especially diverting to New Yorkers. She was not one of the spindly legged tenement children from the East Side slums whom sob sisters could picture salvaging food from garbage cans before taking a Cinderella whisk to fame. Yet it was to this dull-witted observer the most dramatic surprise in grand opera personnel in years. And there was something wholesome and heartening in the way she turned from the applause to the quiet of the prairie. She made her stake, yawned and went back to rural simplicity. And that is gesture a New Yorker can never understand.

Exclusive private dining and dancing clubs springing up yearly rarely last the season. The opening night is always auspicious—but after that it becomes a struggle to keep out the sheriff. Such enterprises are for society people and they get no emotional wallop out of showing off jewels and clothes to each other. They want less exclusive haunts where they may be the cynosure of finger pointing bourgeisle.

Department stores are going in for high brow lectures in assembly halls. One scheduled last week was entitled: "Have parents the right to rear children?" As a local idiot I can think of no persons having a better right.

Fifth avenue buses employ spotters to catch sign thieves. A collecting fad of the moment is the removel of signs from backs of upstairs seats. To denude an entire bus top, using dimes as screwdrivers, is considered a real evening of cutuppiness.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

IN PLANNING your automobile trips do you lay out a course which will enable you to spend considerable time at the home of friends?

You don't do this as a matter of saving money, but you really wish to see and visit with old friends when you can.

You write them that you may be in their vicinity about a certain time and that if they wish to see you, you will call upon them.

This may be your way of procuring an invitation.

You put them in position to feel that they should invite you to be a guest at their homes.

In the majority of cases the response is not because they are so anxious to see you, but it becomes a duty to them.

Only very near and very dear friends are happy to entertain you.

Guests usually disrupt the daily family program.

Especially in summer most families divide their time systematically so that they can work and play with the least effort, physical or mental.

If you cannot pay your way stay at home.
